Many mergers seen in future of co-ops

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG — To launch October as Co-op Month, cooperatives in Pennsylvania took a look at their future this week.

And what did they see?

Here are a few glimpses into the co-op crystal ball from a session on "A Look into the Future" at the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives at the Downtown Holiday Inn, Harrisburg, Monday:

— Co-ops cannot be all things to all people.

— There will be many consolidations and mergers ahead for co-ops.

— Sounder business policies must be adopted.

— Farmer loans may be tied to world market prices.

— Over the long haul the future is optimistic, while there may be hard times ahead.

And to set the stage for the PAFC annual meeting, the official proclamation declaring October as Co-op Month was presented by state government representatives.

Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell read the proclamation signed by the governor which read in part, "to recognize that Pennsylvania cooperative organizations and institutions play an important part in meeting the needs of many of our citizens and in improving our communities." The proclamation noted that cooperatives are among the leading business enterprises in the Commonwealth, with more than three million owner-members.

In proclaiming October as Cooperative Enterprise Month in Pennsylvania, the Governor said, "I urge all citizens to recognize the benefits gained by belonging to

Farm Bureau head visits Adams

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

GETTYSBURG — Robert Delano, Farm Bureau president, sandwiched a visit to the annual meeting of the Adams County Farmers Association Tuesday night between corn harvesting on his Virginia farm and a trip to Australia and offered the following comments at a free-wheeling press conference prior to his prepared address:

–The only new element in the 1985 Farm Bill will likely be a marketplace rather than a big government orientation. But other than that there probably won't be too many changes.

–He believes in the long run farmers are better off today than they were four years ago.

–John Block has been a pretty good ag secretary, but the job is an impossible one with all of the different interests to try and satisfy.

–The future of Northeastern agriculture lies in more specialization, such as fruits and vegetables, to satisfy the large nearby metropolitan markets.

–Yes, the Northeast generally does get shortchanged in federal ag legislation and programs, with favor still going to the South and Midwest.

–More debate is still needed on how to handle the dairy situation in the new Farm Bill, but one thing is

Role of co-ops in ag's future is discussed by panel at annual meeting of Pa. Assn. of Farmer Cooperatives including, from the left, State Rep. David Wright; Wayne Boutwell, president, National Council of Farmer Cooperatives; Gene L. Swackhammer, president, Farm Credit Banks of Baltimore; and moderator George Steele, PAFC vice president.

Avian quarantine lifted

HARRISBURG — The avian flu quarantine in southeastern Pennsylvania, imposed nearly a year ago, has finally been lifted, Pennsylvania, Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell announced Thursday morning.

However, one farm in the quarantine zone that has not been disinfected and several others that have not yet completed their thirty-day downtime, will remain under the quarantine until they are approved, he said.

The quarantine was imposed last October in an effort to combat the avian flu. Over 16 million birds were killed in Pennsylvania because of the highly contagious poultry disease that has cost the federal government almost $50 million to fight.

Lifting of the quarantine will allow poultry farmers to resume normal trade with other states and nations. There are currently 23 nations with trade restrictions on U.S. poultry products.

Some improvement seen in 1984; financial base remains secure

Pa. dairy farm profits cut in half in 1983

Dairy Exclusive

UNIVERSITY PARK — According to a recent study of farm business records, Pennsylvania dairy farm earnings dropped more than 50 percent last year. Net farm income declined from an average of $16,985 or $283 per cow in 1982 to $7,343 or $118 per cow in 1983. Bad weather, lower milk prices, and higher feed prices were largely responsible for the cut in profits.

A somewhat better year is expected in 1984, primarily due to improved weather conditions which permitted dairy farmers to rebuild their forage inventories. This should help offset further declines in milk prices.

Farm records for 1982 and 1983 from more than 800 Pennsylvania dairy farms were included in the study, which was conducted by farm management Extension at Penn State. Farms selected had milking herds averaging 60 cows and were limited to owner-operator units. Only those farms with more than 98 percent of net income from sales of milk and dairy stock were included. The purpose of the study was to determine both the amount and reason for reduced dairy farm income.

Feed costs higher

Increased feed prices was one factor responsible for lower dairy farm profit in 1983. Pennsylvania dairy producers increased spending for feed last year by an average of $2,666 per farm or $43 per cow. Purchased feed accounted for 39 percent of total feed cost and approximated $500 per cow in 1983.

Raised feed is responsible for 61 percent of total feed cost on Pennsylvania dairy farms. This second component of feed cost had a large impact on dairy farm earnings last year.

The amount of raised feed used is measured by the change in feed inventory and by disappearance of crops produced during the year. Inventory increases when amount of feed placed in storage during a year exceeds amount used. If use exceeds amount placed in storage, inventory is reduced.

Larry Jenkins

Bad weather

The amount of stored feed in inventory was substantially reduced in 1983. Dairy farmers were unable to replace stores of feed due to poor weather conditions. Daily feed requirements exceeded amount of feed harvested, therefore stored feed inventory and end-of-year inventory decreased. Numerous empty or near empty silos, hay barns, and granaries appeared by May, 1984.

The reduced value of stored feed inventory last year averaged $8,594 per farm or $139 per cow on farms studied. In order to secure an accurate measure of net farm earnings, reductions must be in-

(X) Includes special services, selected competitive brands, etc.

Delmarva Poultry

Thursday, October 4
Report supplied by USDA

Market Comment: Movement of ready to cook whole birds was moderate overall with most plants noting sufficient demand to clear current production. Advanced interest was slow in developing in several quarters. Best inquiry was centered on leg items and wings. Breast items moved to an irregular call.

Live supplies were adequate with weights mostly desirable to heavy. Slaughter schedules are occasionally reduced but remain moderately heavy overall. Undertone generally steady.

Today's L.T.L. asking prices are unchanged on U.S. Grade A 49-55 cents.

Estimated slaughter of broiler fryers in Delmarva (000).

Estimated 10/4 1,804,000; Actual 9/27 1,727,000; Actual 10/2 1,925,000; Average Weights 10/2 4.30; Average Weights 9/25 4.28.

Eastern Pa. & N.J. Poultry

Wednesday, October 3
Report supplied by USDA

Market Comment. Prices are unchanged. Undertone unsettled but mainly cautious as processors continue to await an influx of offerings from the PA area. This week's supplies were sufficient enough to maintain near normal operations although an occasional plant worked only four days and observance of the Jewish holiday.

Prices Paid at Farm:

Light Type Hens: 12½-14, mostly 13-14

F O.B. Plant 16-17.

NEXT SALE DATE NOVEMBER 30

Good reasons to order early...

Funk's G-Hybrids purchased now are priced below quotations in effect at corn planting time last Spring. (Prices are expected to increase after November 9.) Quantity Discounts. The more Funk's G you order now, the more you save. Combined Discounts when you order Hoffman alfalfa, formulas, etc. along with your seed corn. (The more you buy from now through Spring, 1985, the better discount you earn.) Attractive Prepayment Discount if you pay before November 9. Opportunity to try exciting new hybrids produced in limited quantities. Early buyers are better protected against seed shortages in their favorite hybrids and/or preferred kernel sizes. Limited supplies of Funk's G-Silage Blends are available now. Supplies will not last until planting time.

Rules and Regulations: 1. Hybrids and seed sizes offered are subject to change and availability due to seed production uncertainties. 2. Signed orders must be in our office by November 9, 1984 to qualify for "Early Order" pricing.

Kilmer insurance donates $3,000 to 4-H

WYALUSING — Michael C. Kilmer, representative of the Kilmer Insurance Agency, recently presented a grant of $3,000 to the Northern Tier Region 4-H Organization.

The grant was funded by the Kilmer Insurance Agency and the CIGNA Insurance Companies. CIGNA, through its subsidiary, Insurance Company of North America, has been a supporter of 4-H programs for many years.

The Kilmer Agency is a firm which has specialized in insuring dairy farms for the past ten years.

The check for $3,000 was presented to Bradford County Agricultural Extension Director Jake Guffy, last Friday, in keeping with National 4-H Week, which is celebrated Oct. 7 - Oct. 13.

According to Guffy, the money will be used to expand 4-H Dairy programs in the Northern Tier Counties of Bradford, Susquehanna, Sullivan, Tioga and Wyoming. A portion of the money will also be used for the Northeast District Dairy Competition, which includes Potter, Wayne, Luzerne, Lackawanna and Columbia Counties, in addition to the Northern Tier Counties.

Guffy commented that the funds will be used for activities which will encourage young people to pursue dairy farming as a livelihood.

"We are very appreciative of this gift," said Guffy. "It stopped us in our tracks when we first heard about it." He went on to say that a donation of this size had not been seen on the county level in 4-H history.

Kilmer, a former 4-H member himself, stressed the significance of the 4-H program. "We wanted to do something that would encourage children to develop their interests in the family farm."

Also on hand for the presentation were the 1984 Bradford County Dairy Princess, Wendy Lamont and 4-H member, Daniel Hoppaugh.

Wendy, 17, the daughter of dairy farmers Wayne and Barbara Lamont, Troy, has been active in 4-H for the past nine years. She has accumulated many awards, among them Grand Champion. Wendy is a member of the East Canton Dairy Club.

Dan Hoppaugh, 12, the son of Columbia Cross Roads farmers' Raymond and Joann Hoppaugh, is a member of the Leona 4-H & Dairy Club. Likewise, he has brought many 4-H awards home in the last four years, including a Junior Champion prize.

According to Bradford County 4-H Agent, Levetta Comstock, approximately 1500 Bradford County youths participate in 4-H. Nationally, Comstock said, over 4.7 million young people are part of the 4-H program.

Michael C. Kilmer, left, of Kilmer Insurance Agency, presents a check for $3,000 to Bradford County Agricultural Extension Director, Jake Guffy, right. Also on hand are Bradford County Dairy Princess, Wendy Lamont and Daniel Hoppaugh 4-H Dairy Club member.

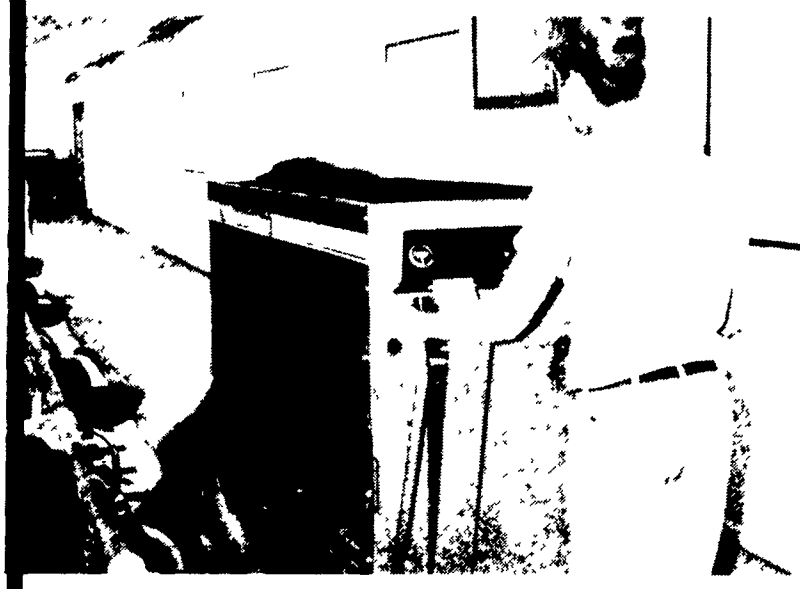
SERIES IV FEED TRANSPORT CART!



Now with convenient hydrostatic drive and extended battery life!

Load it full. Press the new hydrostatic control lever. And you're on your way to feed silage, haylage or any other feed to your dairy herd — quickly, cleanly and conveniently.

With new hydrostatic drive, this new Series IV cart gives you fully variable speed control. Fingertip operation provides any travelling speed you select.

The Weaverline Series IV cart puts you in complete command of your feeding operation. As your Series IV cart moves into position in front of each stall, set the auger and apron-system indicator to discharge the rate of feed you desire. Then shut it off and move on to the next cow. Or if you want, lay a continuous flow of feed. Fast-flow front-end discharge with flexible deflector makes it easy to put your feed right where you want it.

No matter which of the three models you choose, you can depend on Weaverline advanced engineering design. Upkeep, time and labor saved will more than pay for the cost of a Weaverline Series IV transport cart.

Minorities in ag to be discussed

UNIVERSITY PARK — Dr. Joyce Allen, agricultural economist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Economic Research Service, will visit Penn State Oct. 15 and 16 as part of a continuing program on the black experience in agriculture.

Allen will give a public lecture on job opportunities with the federal government focusing specifically on careers with the Agricultural Research Service. She will also hold seminars and join in panel discussions with faculty and students in the College of Agriculture on recruiting and retaining minority students in the agricultural professions.

As a member of the American Agricultural Economics Association, Allen serves on the Subcommittee on Opportunities and Status in Agricultural Economics for Minorities and the Subcommittee on Women in Agricultural Economics.

Allen received a masters of science in agricultural economics from North Carolina State University and a Ph.D. from the University of Illinois. The focus of her research at USDA is the economic and nutritional impacts of food assistance programs on recipients. She also provides general information on public food assistance programs including food stamps, school lunch and school breakfast as well as the Women, Infants and Children (WIC) program.

The minorities in agriculture program is sponsored by the College of Agriculture to present role models of outstanding minorities in agricultural professions.

The lecture, sponsored jointly by the College and by Women in Agriculture (a student/faculty) will be held in 301 Agricultural Administration Building at the corner of Pollock and Shortlidge Roads on Tuesday, Oct. 15 at 7:30 p.m.

NEW FDA-APPROVED SCOURS DRUG

Two good reasons to stop scours with SCOURX®

1. Certified residue-free.
2. Improved weight gain.

Now you can stop scours fast, without residues and without losing weight gain. Your calf can go to market whenever you choose —certified residue-free. And tests show that calves fed while treating with SCOURX gain weight as rapidly as calves that never scoured.

Penn State studying mushroom canning techniques

UNIVERSITY PARK — The Penn State Department of Food Science recently received a cash grant and in kind contributions totaling $161,562 to evaluate new mushroom canning techniques. The money is available through the Ben Franklin program aimed at saving Pennsylvania jobs. Under this partnership agreement with the state, grants are awarded by the Ben Franklin fund only if local industries provide matching cash support.

According to Robert Beelman, Penn State professor of food science, the department received $70,000 in cash benefits. Ben Franklin allocated $40,000 for "Advances in Mushroom Processing Techniques," and seven mushroom canning companies supplied the additional $30,000.

"The remainder of the total budget is made up of in-kind contributions," said Beelman. "Equipment donations, for the most part. Although money for salaries and work space provided by the university also counts toward the $161,562."

A team of five university faculty, a post-doctoral candidate and three graduate students will evaluate new techniques in blanching and retorting, procedures that ensure sterilization of canned mushrooms. "The industry has reversed itself in recent years," said Beelman. "It used to be that 70 percent of Pennsylvania's mushrooms were processed. Now that amount reaches the consumer fresh. This change, coupled with the impact of less expensive foreign imports, has drastically reduced the state's canned mushroom industry."

The fresh versus canned market probably will not change. But through production efficiency, canning companies may be able to produce more product for less, thereby improving competition with foreign imports and saving the American industry from complete collapse.

"At least 800 jobs are directly affected by the canned mushroom industry in this state," says Beelman. "But if canning declines further, growers could also suffer." Under current production conditions, 20 to 25 percent of the mushroom crop is not suitable for fresh market sales. If these lower grade mushrooms can not be sold to the canning industry, grower profits will decline.

"Penn State's been developing new processing techniques for about 20 years," says Beelman. "We're going to continue to do all we can to keep the Pennsylvania canned mushroom industry intact. Right now we're trying to provide techniques that can be implemented within the next five to 10 years."

Herbicide economics requires study

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal. — Telling a farmer to use the least expensive herbicides that will do the job right is like telling him to plant the first day after the last hard frost. It's good advice, but you need more information to make it work.

The last hard frost may be tough to predict, but experience and detailed herbicide label directions can help you decide which herbicide tank mix will do the best job at the least cost on your no-till soybean crop.

Paraquat+Plus, a fast-acting, contact herbicide, is the standard treatment of emerged weeds at planting time in no-till systems. Another herbicide with some burndown capability is Bronco, a premixed combination of Roundup and Lasso (Roundup without the Lasso is not generally recommended as a contact herbicide, because perennial weeds may not be at the proper stage of growth for control at normal application rates in minimum tillage and no-tillage systems.)

Paraquat+Plus and Bronco, in combination with other labeled herbicides, will control most emerged annual weeds, suppress many emerged perennial weeds and give pre-emergence control of many annual weeds when soybeans are planted directly into a cover crop, stale seedbed, or in previous crop residues such as wheat stubble

But neither Bronco nor Paraquat+Plus will control regrowth of perennial weeds or unemerged perennial weeds When perennial weeds appear after the soybean crop has emerged, directed or nondirected postemergence treatments must be used

In deciding on a pre-emergence tank mix for no-till soybeans, keep in mind the following recommendations, taken from the manufacturers' labels. In all cases, check your fields carefully for emerged weeds at planting times, and refer to product labels for application and mixing directions

When using Bronco

— Do not mix Bronco will liquid fertilizers, herbicide oils or any other materials other than water, except the three residual products shown in the chart.

— Reduced control of emerged weeds may occur when weeds are under poor growing conditions, such as from drought stress, when application follows recent mowing or when excessive amounts of dust cover the plants.

— Rainfall or sprinkler irrigation within six hours after application may reduce control of emerged weeds. (But rainfall or irrigation is required sometime after application to move Bronco into the weed germination zone for pre-emergence weed control.)

When Using Paraquat+Plus

— Rainfall is not necessary to activate Paraquat+Plus, and rainfall will not wash it off target weeds after the Paraquat has dried.

— Add Ortho X-77 Spreader (non-ionic) at the recommended rate for complete coverage.

— Apply Paraquat+Plus in sufficient water to ensure adequate coverage and penetration of crop residue. As density of stubble, crop residue or weeds increase, spray gallonage should be increased within the recommended range — Use only clean water, as clay particles deactivate Paraquat.

Adams beef producers to meet

GETTYSBURG — The Adams County Beef Producers will hold its next meeting on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams County Extension Office. The evening's program presented by Fran Koch from the Soil Conservation District will be a slide presentation on the Chesapeake Bay and erosion control. All interested people are welcome to attend.

The main business on the agenda will be the election of officers and directors for the coming year. All members are encouraged to attend and bring suggestions and ideas for next year's activities.

Pa. Forestry Association executive director, Robert Clark addresses a group of 60 landowners during the Southeastern Pa. Forest Landowners' Conference held last Saturday a Ephrata's Holiday Inn.

At S.E. Forest Landowner's Conference:-

Timber is Pa.'s 'biggest' crop

BY JACK HUBLEY

EPHRATA — Timber, from management to marketing, was the subject of the Southeastern Pa. Landowners' Conference held at the Ephrata Holiday Inn on Sept. 29.

Co-sponsored by the Pa Forestry Association and the Conservation Districts of southeastern Pa., the conference featured speakers from the Pa. Bureau of Forestry and Penn State, as well as private enterprise.

The event was moderated by Pa. Forestry Association executive director, Robert Clark, who, following opening remarks, turned the program over to extension forest resources specialist, Dr. James Grace.

Opening with some forestry facts, Dr. Grace pointed out that Pennsylvania leads the nation in the number of forest landowners, with the state's one-half million owners accounting for 73 percent of it 15.8 million acres of forests.

In the years immediately following a clearcutting, as many as 20,000 trees per square acre will sprout, he said. But by the time the stand is 100 years old, the density will have dropped to 60 to 100 trees per acre whether or not the stand is actively managed

"The purpose of management, then, is to select those trees that will live and those that will die," Grace said, adding that cutting is the landowner's primary management tool.

Grace urged landowners to familiarize themselves with the types of stands located on their grounds, and to develop a management plan contingent on specific goals, be they maximum timber or firewood production, or wildlife management.

The specialist briefly reviewed the current timber market, stating that, while the red and white oaks, cherry and white ash, may be currently in demand, the market will undoubtedly fluctuate in years to come. Just as important as species, is the form of the tree, he said. The most valuable trees of any species will be those tall, straight specimens, free of branches and defects in the lower area.

Dr. Grace then recommmended management techniques favoring the more desirable individuals. His recommendations included marking one "good" tree for every 20 feet, then removing competing trees on two sides of the desirable one.

"Remember that the total growth of a stand is fixed. You can either grow a lot of small trees or fewer large trees," he said, adding that the secret to maximum timber revenues is growing large trees as fast as possible.

Dr. Grace divided harvest techniques into even-age and uneven-age cuttings, with even-age techniques including clearcutting, seed tree and shelterwood methods. Grace advised that regeneration should be underway prior to clearcutting. The seed tree method is much the same as clearcutting, he said, except that a scattering of mature timber is allowed to stand to reseed the cut areas. In shelterwood management, some timber is permitted to stand in a series of shelter strips.

Uneven age management involves the selective removal of mature trees, a strategy that Grace could not recommend to the landowner due to its complexity. When harvests are based on this technique, he said, the result may be a woodlot populated with low-value species such as beech, sugar maple and hemlock.

About 65 percent of the timber harvested in Pennsylvania is suitable for saw logs and veneer, according to extension forest resources specialist, James Finley, who advised landowners to know what types of logs they were selling and what the current market was for their wood.

Finley said that landowners normally had the option to sell their timber for a lump sum or by single tree units. The lump sum agreement was preferable for most owners selling at infrequent intervals, he said. He also cautioned owners to expect some damage to their land and remaining trees, and added that prices will vary depending on the difficulty of timber removal.

DALLASTOWN — Stepping into the retail sales market at Raab Farms is like taking a stroll through a giant harvest-season cornucopia.

In one corner are rows of baskets, red and green with apples. Containers sit, filled with pears, in another direction. Fat peaches hang over the edges of cartons lining the sales stand. while customers depart lugging bags of tomatoes, cantaloupes, peppers, squash.

Traffic outside the complex of buildings flows constantly, as produce buyers mix with wholesalers' trucks, while work crews haul in loads of filled baskets and head back over the hill with a stack of empties for the next trip.

Calling the plays, off in the background of this fruitful fiefdom of activity, in an office surrounded by packers and sorters, fruit boxes and horticultural equipment, is P. Joseph Raab — on the telephone again.

Joe Raab, long time fruitgrower, community activist and former county commissioner, tackles the horticulture business with an energetic enthusiasm and optimism that has won him a host of friends among both agriculture and business.

Affectionately dubbed the "Jolly Green Giant" by some of his closest friends, Raab leaves the phone, whizzes out of the office, directs a wagonful of bell peppers toward the loading dock, hails a familiar face among the crowd of customers, teases a couple of his high-school sales staffers, proudly points out his grandson among the work crew, and zips back to the telephone again, barely pausing for breath.

Joe Raab, at 73, with a mixed life of planting and politics in his blood, could leave younger farmers trailing in the lurch as he plots harvest and sales for the bumper crops of produce, in a year when every grower battled for space in an overflowing, tight market.

"If we farmers could just get together...," he grumbles, leaving the sentence dangling and racing for the phone to tie up more loose business ends.

Born in Schuylkill Haven, the infant Raab became a York Countian just months later, when his grandfather died and his parents returned home to help manage the family's 39-acre Dallastown general farm.

After finishing ninth grade, Raab left school to help out on the farm, along with taking a $50-per month job at the neighboring Yoe Orchard Company. With seven years experience in the fruit business, he moved on to a job with a York area manufacturer, while attending night classes at the local Thompson Business College.

By 1935, the Great Depression's devastation of the farm economy had touched the Raab's home place. Joe, backed by savings from his town job, took over the mortgage on the 39 acres, becoming the fifth genertion of the Raab family to till this land that has been acquired - via a goatskin deed - from William Penn's nephew, John Penn.

In the ensuing years, additional land was added to the original purchase; and today's Raab Farm encompasses nearly 140 acres, about 20 of it rented, in near rows of fruit trees and vegetable production.

From the beginning, Raab was an industry innovator, and became one of the area's first grower to initiate the now-popular "pick your own" brand of harvest. Customers continue to flock to the busy, attractive market, lured by the quality produce for sale and the

Johne's Update: Answers through research

Editor's note: Johne's disease is of growing concern to more and more dairy farmers, and is the subject of much recent research. This article is the first of a two-part series to up-date farmers on research progress and current knowledge about Johne's.

NEW BOLTON CENTER—Will my cows contract the debilitating Johne's disease? How common is it in Pennsylvania herds? Could my cows already be harboring the paratuberculosis organism that causes Johne's? And what are the economic consequences of Johne's if it's already in my herd? You, as a dairyman want to know the answers to these questions.

In a few short months, the dairy industry will be turning to Dr. Robert Whitlock of the Univ. of Pennsylvania's New Bolton Center for the answers to these questions. As the coordinator of a three-year collaborative project on Johne's, he has already collected a significant amount of data on the disease.

Dairy Exclusive

And collecting data has to be step one in combating Johne's because so little is known about the disease.

If you've had a positive Johne's cow in your herd, you know what a threat the disease is. You probably weren't aware of the disease until it reached it's acute clinical stage, when the cow had severe diarrhea and became increasingly emaciated, although she continued to eat normally.

At that stage, and at any stage for a cow that tests positive for Johne's, the only choice is to cull her, because the disease which is so difficult to diagnose also has no known cure.

What members of the dairy industry fear are the cow~ who are infected, but aren't showing the clinical signs of Johne's disease. These undetected cows are not only transmitting the paratuberculosis organism to other animals, particularly young stock, they are also an economic liability because of resultant decreased production, decreased fertility, and increased susceptibility to mastitis.

To begin answering the ultimate question of the economic seriousness of Johne's, at least two things must first be achieved. First, quick and reliable tests must be developed to diagnose the disease, and, secondly, a survey of Pa cows must be undertaken to get a figure on just how widespread the disease is in the 16,000 dairy herds in the state

Three-year study

Achieving these two goals is the primary concern of Dr. Whitlock and the other members of the Pa. Dept. of Agriculture funded project. Other members of the research group include Dr Larry Hutchinson, extension veterinarian from Penn State and researchers at the National Animal and Disease Laboratory in Ames, Iowa. Their three-year study began in Oct. 1983.

With one year of the project completed, Whitlock isn't ready to give definitive answers to the plaguing questions about Johne's, but he is prepared to describe the extensiveness of the research and what this could mean for Pa. dairymen.

"I'm not trying to be self-centered or anything, but we seriously think our study is probably the biggest and best, and at the very least most comprehensive, study on Johne's undertaken in the world to date," says Whitlock.

To understand the scope of the research, consider the work that has been completed in the first year.

Phase one of the project was to do a survey of cull cows in Pennsylvania to try and get a handle on the extent of the problem. To do this they have gone to Taylor's Packing Plant in Wyalusing one day a week for the past year to get a random sampling of dairy cull cows to test for Johne's. Taylor's handles 10 percent of the cull cows in the United States.

Now in the final weeks of this phase, they have gathered feces, blood, and tissue samples from nearly 1500 slaughtered animals, about half of which are from Pennsylvania.

Numerous tests will be done on the samples. The feces culture will be done out at Ames and five blood tests will done for each animal.

Three different tissue samples were taken from each animal from areas around the small intestine where the paratuberculosis organism grows. Three different stains will be used on each of the three tissue samples to identify the organism.

"Take 4500 tissue samples times three different stains and you get an idea of the number of slides that have to be examined," notes Whitlock. And this doesn't include the fecal and blood cultures that are done as well.

But it's the tissue samples that are a vital part of determining the sensitivity and specificity of the other diagnostic tests for Johne's.

"Here we have a so-called 'gold standard' to see if the culture is positive or negative for Johne's," explains Whitlock. Obtaining that tissue sample is not possible with a live animal, and that's why it's crucial to develop these other diagnostic tests.

Whitlock emphasizes sensitivity and specificity as the important characteristics of a diagnostic test.

Most dairymen are aware of the drawbacks of the fecal culture that is now used to diagnose Johne's – a lag time of several weeks is involved in obtaining results.

Whitlock explains why reliable tests need to be specific, that is able to show paratuberculosis and not mistakenly some similar organism, and sensitive, that is able to pick up Johne's even if only a small number of the organisms are present in the animal.

"The fecal culture, for instance, is specific – if the test comes out positive then the paratuberculosis organism really is there. But the fecal culture is not a particularly sensitive diagnostic test – it will only detect Johne's about one third of the time," comments Whitlock.

The blood, tissue, and fecal samples from the 1500 cull cows will give Whitlock and his fellow researchers, which include two full-time and one part-time technician at New Bolton, an opportunity to develop these new diagnostic tests.

There are five blood serum tests that they are using on the blood samples and Whitlock is hopeful that one or a combination of these will have the necessary specificity and sensitivity for use by veterinarians to test animals suspected of Johne's.

Economic consequences

Of those 1500 slaughtered cull cows, how many were Johne's positive?

"We found the paratuberculosis organism in about 10 percent so far," says Whitlock. But more information about the prevalence of the disease will be gathered in the continuing phases of the project, which focus on learning as much as possible about the disease so that the question of total economic loss can be dealt with.

Whitlock emphasizes that this is not merely the problem of economic loss from the cows that show clinical signs of the infection and must therefore be culled. They're just as concerned in their study with the economic consequences of the sub-clinical cases.

It's apparent, explains Whitlock, that many cows are carriers of Johne's yet never develop into acute cases with the resulting diarrhea, emaciation, and eventual death. Previous studies have shown that these subclinical carriers of Johne's may have increased susceptibility to mastitis, decreased fertility, and lowered milk production.

To gain more definitive answers about the economic consequences, extensive information is being gathered in this three-year study In the just-completed phase one, the researchers were able to identify each of the 1500 cows and are following up on the 600 or so that are from Pa. by sending out questionnaires to the former owners of the slaughtered animals.

They are gathering information about all of the cows, whether positive or negative Johne's

The questionnaires' ask all sorts of questions about the cow, about age, production and breeding records, health and management conditions, and other items about the herd that she came from To date they've had about a 60 percent rate of return on the questionaires.

Dairymen can help

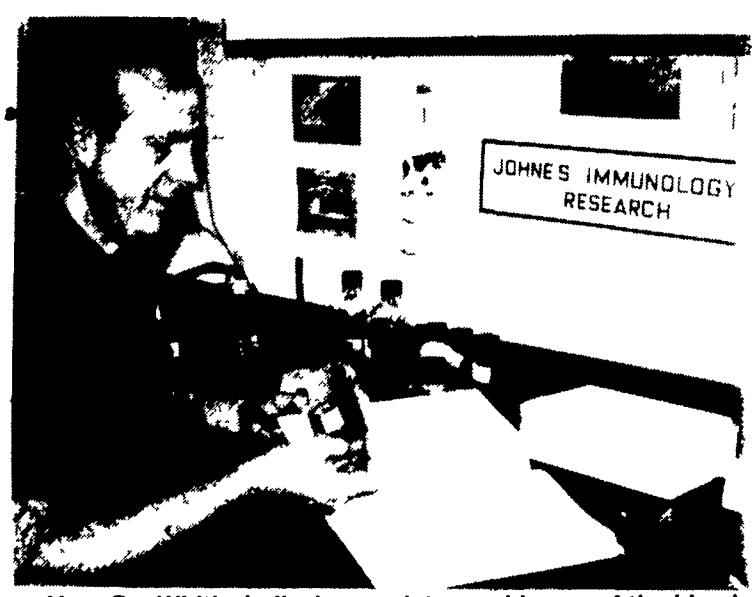
"If anyone has received one of these questionnaires, it will be a tremendous help to us if you do take the time to fill it out and return it." reminds Whitlock. "Even five or six more forms that we get back will help us a lot in evaluating the problem." And he reminds farmers that they'll .be helping themselves by helping the dairy industry.

Dr. Whitlock examines a Johne's infected heifer. Johne's disease usually doesn't appear clinically until after two years of age, but this 16-month-old heifer is severely emaciated. Plasma will be taken from the animal to be put in an antibody bank that is used for Johne's research at the Animal and Disease Laboratory in Ames.

The purpose of gathering information on both the positive and negative testing animals is to compare the two groups. If significant differences are discovered on one or more items, such as body weight, for instance, or occurrence of mastitis, this may be a clue to other effects of Johne's and will deserve more research.

The information gathered in phase one is only the beginning. Phase two, which has already begun, is to do herd studies to gather even more information that might prove useful in determining the incidence and spread of Johne's.

Next week read about phase two of the Johne's research project, about finding Johne's positive animals, and about management practices that can be undertaken to help curtail the spread of the disease.



Here Dr. Whitlock displays a plate used in one of the blood tests being developed to diagnose Johne's. More sensitive and specific diagnostic tests are an important goal of the Johne's research.

Dairylea renames directors

SYRACUSE — Five area dairymen have been re-elected to the board of directors of Dairylea Cooperative, the Northeast's largest farm-to-consumer dairy marketing cooperative.

The dairymen directors re-elected to the cooperative's board include: David Hardie, Lansing, N.Y.; Peter Schuyler, Jr., Cobleskill, N.Y.; Beriah Willson, Vernon Center, N.Y.; Duane Hartzel, Slippery Rock, Pa.; and August Knispel, Pittstown, N.J

Hardie is Director of Dairylea's District 4. He was a subdistrict president for six years before joining Dairylea's Board, and was also a member of Dairylea's director on the O-AT-KA Board in Batavia, New York and is a Batavia, New York and is a director of Dairy, Food and Nutrition Council. He is a Farm Bureau member and has been a county Farm Bureau president. Hardie farms 600 acres with his son in Lansing.

Schuyler, Director of District 13, was first elected a Dairylea director 21 years ago. He is a director on the Syracuse-based American Dairy Association and Dairy Council and is also a director of the National Milk Producers Federation. He has served as president of the Schoharie County Farm Bureau and president of Schoharie County DHIA. Schuyler farms 500 acres in Cobleskill and has a herd of purebred Ayrshires.

Willson has served as District 10 Director since 1975. He was elected to Dairylea's Executive Committee last year and was recently appointed to the New York Dairy Promotion Advisory Board. He has served as director and president of the Vernon local cooperative as well as sub-district president, and was recently honored as Farmer of the Year in Oneida County. Willson and his sons farm 500 acres and milk more than 100 Holsteins.

Hartzell has been Director of Dairylea's District 1 since 1969. He has served as a member of the Resolutions Committee and as subdistrict president. He was recently appointed to the 15-member Advisory Board for the Pennsylvania Milk Promotion and Marketing Program, and is also a member of the Pennsylvania Farmers Association. In partnership with his sons, Stephen and George, Mr Hartzell farms 378 acres in the Slippery Rock area.

Knispel, who became a Dairylea member in 1962, is Director for Dairylea's District 7. He has served as sub-district president as well as president and secretary-treasurer of the Pittstown local. Knispel was recently elected president of the Garden State Milk Council and participates in the newly developed "Agriculture In The Classroom" project. He also serves as mayor of the Franklin Township and sits on the New Jersey Dairy Industry Advisory Council. Knispel still runs the 300 acre farm on which he was raised.

T 1100 takes the worry out of the wait.

Once the corn tassles, all you can do is stand back and watch. That's not easy when you've been breaking your back since spring. Doing everything you can to make this your best corn crop ever.

It helps take the worry out of the wait, when you're growing a crop of T 1100. You've seen how it stands up under stress. Last year was proof of that. You've also seen how it yields. Not just on paper. But right here, where all those bushels really mean something.

Knowing those extra truckloads are out there doesn't make the wait any easier. But it sure makes the wait a lot more worthwhile.

Indiana farm tops Eastern National Holstein Show

HARRISBURG—Spectators lined the show ring shoulder-to-shoulder as Stookey Holsteins, Inc., Leesburg, Ind., took grand champion honors in the conclusion of the Eastern National Holstein Show last Friday at the Farm Show Complex.

The champion, C Continental Scarlet-Red, also received the senior champion honors and won the aged cow class. Her sire is Romandale Count Crystan, and her dam, Wood Echo Designed for Duty.

In the first half of the Holstein competition on Thursday, Stookey showed two reserve winners, the reserve junior champion female and the reserve grand champion bull.

Competition was stiff with 567 entries in the two-day Holstein show that capped the week's activities.

The reserve grand champion and reserve senior champion, Campbell-Hollow Ultimate Kate, was owned and exhibited by Dreamstreet Holsteins, Inc., of Walton, N.Y. This five-year-old winner was sired by Quality Ultimate.

Dreamstreet Holsteins also topped the field of 228 exhibitors in being named the premier breeder for the second year in a row.

Pinehurst Farms of Sheboygan Falls, Wis., was repeat winner of the premier breeder banner. They also showed the grand champion bull, C International Genpedro, in Thursday's competition.

This Holstein show is an international event, as evidenced by the premier sire, Quality Ultimate, from United Breeders of Canada. The Ontario group won the award in 1983 as well.

One of the special awards at the three national Holstein shows is the Joe Eves Trophy for the cow with highest adjusted milk record that also places in the top ten of any class. This year's winner was an aged cow, C Kayglen Cassy Ultimate, again a Dreamstreet Holsteins animal.

The 1984 best milking female was one of the few winners from south of the Mason-Dixon Line, Round Oak Ultimate Faith, owned by Ken-Wan of Stanley, Va.

The Eastern National Holstein Show concluded the week-long All-American Dairy Show, which is sponsored by the Pa. Dairy and Allied Industries Association in conjunction with the Pa. Department of Agriculture and the Pa. Farm Products Show Commission.

1500 to gather for Grange convention

HARRISBURG — The state's largest annual agricultural convention, the 112th State Grange Session, will be held Oct. 22-25 in Gettysburg.

About 1500 members from throughout the state, 600 of them voting delegates, are expected to attend this year's convention. Delegates representing each of 553 local and 55 county units will vote on policy to guide the rural farm organization's legislation activities. Major officers, including state master (president), overseer (vice president), and executive committee will be elected during the four-day meeting.

Each year, the Grange's state convention is hosted by the granges in a different county. This year, the granges of York and Adams counties, representing 535 members, have raised the funds to put on the grange session. Fund-raising activities, which included plays, raffles, bazaars and sales, began four years ago.

Aroung 200 resolutions originating from local granges will be considered by delegates in Gettysburg. Resolutions are written at the local community level of the grange and, if approved, are considered at county wide meetings. Resolutions approved by the county are given final approval or disapproval during the state convention. Those resolutions pertaining to national issues will be considered at the National Grange's convention in Portland, Me., in November.

In addition to voting activities, the State Session also includes many statewide contests, such as needlework, quilting, baking, photography and art. A live talent contest, which is open to the public, will be held on October 24 at 7:30 p.m.

As the Grange is a fraternal order, members attending the convention will participate in a ceremony to obtain the Sixth Degree, received only at the state session. The Grange has seven degrees, with four given by the local grange, one by the county, and the highest, the seventh, bestowed by the National Grange.

All events, with the exception of the talent contest, which will be held at the Gettysburg Junior High School, will be held at the Sheraton Inn of Gettysburg.

U.S. Sen. Arlen Specter and Lt. Gov. William Scranton, III, will be featured keynote speakers at the annual convention.

Other guest speakers during the Grange convention include U.S. Congressman William Goodling (R-19); Penrose Hallowell, State Secretary of Agriculture; and State Senator Patrick Stapleton (D-Indiana), minority chairman, Senate Agriculture Committee.

Picked early in the morning by the summer crews, red-ripe tomatoes wait for delivery from the fields to retail and wholesale customers of the Raab firm.

Many local high school students find summer employment at the Raab business, performing such jobs as sorting the pear crop.

enjoyment of the pleasurable free bonuses of fresh air and exercise afforded in the chance to harvest their own food.

While the market is open six days a week, year round, strawberry season marks the first major spring harvest push as the dozen acres of straw-mulched berry patched begin to show red. A couple of acres of raspberries follow, ripening along with some ten acres of several varieties of cherries.

Mid-summer main crops include 16 acres of sweet corn, three of peaches, and over five of cantaloupes and cucumbers. Assorted vegetable plantings, from asparagus to zucchini, round out the broad selection of table-fresh offerings.

Apples are the mainstay of the orchard, with 36 acres cropped to several varieties that comprise a major part of the winter months' produce displays. Fall favorites of local customers include pears and seasonal decorative produce, like gourds and pumpkins for pies and jack-o-lanterns.

"You name it, we got it," quips this veteran, as he pauses just long enough for a fast trip through the beautifully-kept orchards.

In 1960, Raab's love of people drew him into the local political arena, where he served nine years on the township's board of commissioners. A four-year term as president of the York County board of commissioners followed.

A decision that Raab still calls "the hardest of my life" came in 1972, as he debated between a farther pursuit of public service or a return to full-time farming.

In the end, seedlings, soil and sprouts won out over the proverbial smoke-filled rooms of campaign strategy, and the "Jolly Green Giant" retired to again take the reins of his first love.

Both a sixth and seventh generation of Raab's have been drawn back to these fruit-studded rolling fields, rich in family history.

Jane Raab Lehman, his daughter, is sales manager of the business. Meanwhile, 12-year-old Jonathon, Joe's grandson and son of P. Joseph Raab II is learning the business literally at the bottom of the ladder, working with the picking, packing and sorting summer crews.

A third Raab, Joe's brother Walter, has been a long-time employee of the family firm, assisting with the management and handling of the crops.

Cars are lined up in the parking lot, another wagonload of produce backs up to the unloading dock and three employees wait to confer with the boss. Relentlessly, the phone is jangling again and Raab takes off again to wrap up more produce bargaining, his parting lament still hanging in the air.

"If only we farmers could get together...."

E. Nat'l Livestock Show hosts 1500 entries

BY JACK HUBLEY

TIMONIUM, Md. — With 1519 head of livestock competing for top honors this week at the Maryland State Fairgrounds in Timonium, the Eastern National Livestock Show managed to increase by nearly 300 entries over last year's field.

In Thursday morning's 4-H/FFA Steer Show, Margaret Herr, of Narvon, got Pennsylvania off to a fast start by winning the first class of Angus competition. But even though her steer named Boss lived up to his name at last week's Ephrata Fair, he couldn't maintain the momentum in Maryland.

Champion Angus honors eventually went to a 1,320-pound steer shown by Shawn Pieper of Strasburg, Ill. Sired by Hiway Blue Chip, Pieper's winner was also named champion at the Illinois State Fair in August.

Grand champion honors, over all breeds, went to Denise Stebbins of Farmersville Ohio, whose Coaltrain-sired steer was named champion in the Simmental division.

Champion Angus: Shawn Pieper, Ill.
Reserve Champion Angus: Mark Moxley, Md.
Champion Limousin: Cary Cumberland
Reserve Champion Limousin: Bruce Bassler, Md.
Champion Shorthorn: Carol Lynn Hodiak, Md.
Reserve Champion Shorthorn: Adrian Brown
Champion Chianina: Doug Goodwin, W. Va.
Reserve Champion Chianina: Jeff Riecke, Ind.
Champion Hereford: Chris Meade, Ind.
Reserve Champion Hereford: Phil Weaver
Champion Simmental: Denise Stebbins, Ohio
Reserve Champion Simmental: John Callebs, Kent.

Junior Heifer competition began with the Angus Show, and judge Jimmy Linthicum of Okla. found what he was looking for in Ohio. Champion Angus heifer was PVF

Falkland and Ace lock horns at Cow Palace

BY JACK HUBLEY

TIMONIUM, Md. — By the conclusion of the Eastern National Livestock Show's Polled Hereford Show on Thursday evening, it was apparent that the British had fought for possession of the wrong Falklands.

Descending on the Fairgrounds' Cow Palace from Schellsburg, Pa., was a stampede of seven heifers exhibited by Falklands Farm that handily trampled the competition. In addition to taking both grand and reserve grand champion female honors, Falklands went home with the senior champion, junior champion and calf champion awards. Added to this list were senior get-of-sire, junior get-of-sire, best six head, and premier exhibitor.

For his grand champion female, judge Henry Bergfeld of Summitville, Ohio, selected FLF MPH Lady Hotline 3044, owned by Falklands Farm and Mohican Polled Herefords. Exhibited by Paul Slayton, the Mar.,'83 heifer is a PRL930K Hotline 347N daughter.

At the reserve spot, judge Bergfeld placed another Hotline daughter, FLF BBH Lady Hotline 3025. This was the heifer that brought a top bid of $100,000 from Dr. Lester Martin of Cincinnati, at Falklands' production sale last month. Falklands retains showing rights on the fancy female until Jan., 1985.

But their winning momentum failed to carry the Falklands entries over a sky-high wall of bulls exhibited by Ace Polled Herefords of Millbrook, N.Y. Winning Ace bulls were named grand and reserve grand champions, senior champion, calf and reserve calf champions.

Ace's Montie Soules showed the grand champion bull, named Ryder. Sired by The Duke, Ryder was calved in Apr., '82. At the reserve position was Ace's Sept.,'83 bull calf named Timber Jack, a Lumber Jack son.

Here's how the winning Polled Hereford slate ended up:

Heifer Show:
Heifer Calf Champion: Falklands Farm
Reserve Calf champion: Ace Polled Herefords, Wm. Murphy
Junior Champion Heifer: Falklands Farm, Mohican Polled Herefords Reserve Junior Champion: Ace Polled Herefords, Prospect Mt.
Senior Champion Heifer: Falklands Farm, Blueberry Hill
Reserve Senior Champion: Ace Polled Herefords, Lu Rose Est.
Grand Champion Heifer: Falklands Farm, Mohican

3378

By going with 3378, you can be sure your corn will stand up to the hardships of the toughest growing seasons. Outstanding staygreen, good tolerance to prevalent diseases and excellent standability make 3378 one heck of a defensive hybrid. And strong emergence and early vigor mean it's also a prime candidate for reduced tillage. On most soil types and under a wide variety of conditions, 3378 will come through with the returns you're after.

3358

Growers in the east are going to be harvesting a lot of grain when they plant this outstanding hybrid. In 498 side-by-side comparisons over three years, 3358 averaged 7.2 bushels per acre more than the competition. Take a yield advantage like that together with excellent tolerance to leaf and stalk disease, ease of combining and good grain texture, and you've got one great performer.

Here is a hybrid that's made a lot of friends. 3184 adapts to most any soil type and farming practice and shows a high rating for seedling vigor, drought tolerance and stalk quality. But what you'll really like are the top-notch yields you get from this dependable producer. In good years and not-so-good, 3184 still puts out the yields. The superior performance of 3184 makes it a "must plant" hybrid for this season.

Forest Conference

removal, the DER's Gordon Hiller cautioned landowners that the Clean Steams Law was amended in 1972 to include soil erosion and sedimentation.

"Sediment is the greatest pollutant, by volume, in the U.S. today," Hiller said, adding that waterborne soil particles also carry fertilizers and pesticides, and promote flooding by reducing a stream's water carrying capacity.

Important factors to consider prior to timber removal include soil type (of which Pa. has about 200, Hiller said), slope, stream locations, seeps and spongy areas and road locations. Roads should have drainage ditches, and water bars and culverts where necessary, Hiller pointed out. He also recommended that they be open to sunlight to promote drying.

The afternoon session was devoted to enumerating the services, both public and private, available for managing and marketing timber. Leading off was the Bureau of Forestry's William Corlett who pointed out that the Bureau has some 40 foresters statewide who are available to all forest landowners for timber management counseling.

Each landowner is entitled to four days of the Bureau forester's time each year, Corlett said, although the Bureau will not become involved in the actual marketing phase. To handle commercial transactions, Corlett advised landowners to seek the services of a consulting forester.

Forestry consultant Donald Heverling, of Lebanon Valley Timberlands in Lebanon, was on hand to outline the services provided by private consulting firms. Heverling pointed out that the largest part of his workload involves timber sale administration.

"This service easily pays for itself", he noted, adding that the consulting forester will not only be aware of what the product is worth, but also where to find potential buyers.

In addition to direct marketing, the duties of the consulting forester, as delineated by Heverling, include timber stand improvement, the drafting of forest management plans, forest inventories, and appraisals, and tree planting.

Outlining the services available from pulpwood companies and sawmills was Charles Brown of the Glatfelter Pulpwood Company of Spring Grove. Brown pointed out that such companies offer services similar to those offered by the Bureau and independent consultants, except that no fees were normally included since the timber would be sold to the company employing the consultant.

In closing comments the Pa. Forestry Association's Ken Olenderski, concluded that the non-profit Association, formed in 1870, is devoted to the wise use of renewable forest resources. About 60 landowners, representing more than 3,000 acres of forestland, attended the conference.

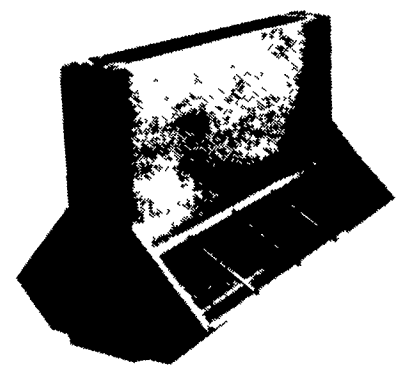
Dry Feeders

NEW CONCEPT - Deeper Feed Trough With A Feed Saver Lip



Advantages of Modern Ag Systems Stainless Steel Feed Equipment

All Stainless is Grade 304 which means Top Grade

- Stainless steel offers easier cleaning and no rust or corrosion for an extended life span.
- Top adjustable slides allow precise feed flow and very minimal feed loss.
- Wide tops are standard on all wet feeders and also available in dry feeders for maximum feed capacity.
- Floor mounts are standard on all double-sided feeders.
- Wall mounts are standard on all single-sided feeders.
- Fence mounts are available on feeders
- Modern Ag Systems Feeders consist of precision parts and all-welded construction for maximum strength.

PORK PRODUCERS WE SALUTE YOU

PROVEN
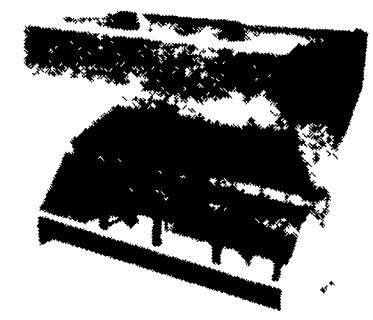
No Electricity Required!



10-15% Better Feed Conversion With Liquid Feed!
FASTER GAINS ON LESS FEED

- Rugged 14-gauge type .304 stainless steel throughout entire feeder makes the Modern Ag Feeder as tough as they come.
- Hogs lick the platter clean when water and feed are combined in trough. This contributes to a 10% to 15% improvement in feed efficiency. Hogs go to market 10 days to two weeks faster on wet feed compared to dry feed.
- You get reduced feed wastage. Hogs get their water and feed at the same place. No need to carry feed on snout or mouth to waterer, where it is sloughed off into holding pit. Hogs feed faster, too, making it possible to supply more pigs with fewer feed holes. Pen square footage per pig can also be reduced.
- Get little pigs off to fast start. Young pigs will drink before they eat. When you combine feed and water at the same source you give those little pigs fast, healthy starts.

Producers have claimed....

- pigs are more content
- less water wastage, therefore less manure storage required
- feed is easier to digest
- less feed wastage
- days to market reduced by 6 to 8 days
- Sows are better milkers, therefore bigger, more even litters

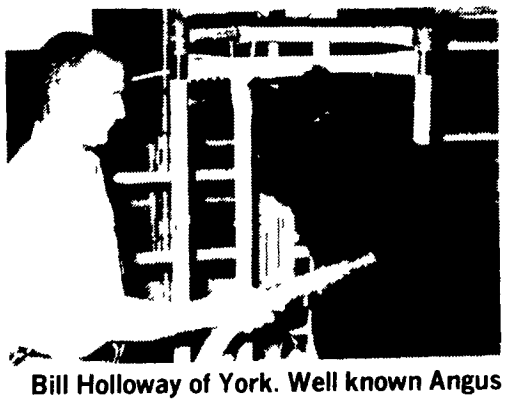
Eastern National Livestock Show

COW palace

Falklands Farm swept the Open Polled Hereford Heifer Show. Exhibitor Paul Slayton looks on as Greg Untied and Dave Snyder prep an entry.

Jamie Kohr of Wrightsville teamed with Lauxmont Lacy J to take champion Chianina honors in Jr. Heifer Show. This pair sparkles.



Bill Holloway of York. Well known Angus hair stylist.

"I can't believe I washed this whole thing." says Margie Brothers of Lakeview Farm in East Berlin. Last year's Chianina champion bull, LVF Piero, was back. And bigger and better than ever.

Barbaramere 983, exhibited by Molly Cooper of Zanesville, Ohio. A Pine Drive Big Sky daughter, the heifer was also named champion of the bred-and-owned division. No "dark horse" entry, Cooper's female, nicknamed Sweetie Pie, placed second in her class at the National Junior Show, and was champion bred-and-owned heifer in the Ohio Preview Show.

The show's top Chianina female was exhibited by Jamie Kohr of York, Pa. Bred by Lauxmont Farms, the Feb.,'83, heifer was sired by Ino, out of Lezina, both fullblood Chianinas.

Laura Tessier of Laytonville, Md., brought honor to the home state by exhibiting the champion Hereford female. A March, '83 heifer, PRL757 Cherry was sired by BTPRL Driver, and was a class winner at the Junior National Show in Iowa. Miss Tessier also showed the reserve champion Hereford, an April, '83, Hotline daughter.

Top Charolais honors went to Pennsylvania's Crystal Clutter, of Prosperity. Her heifer, named Riverwood Streamline, was a March, '83, entry.

Both champion and reserve champion Limousin honors went to Bruce Bassler, of Ellicott City, Md.

For John Callebs, the long drive from Lexington, Kent., was time well spent. In addition to showing the reserve champion Simmental steer earlier in the day, Callebs' Simmental heifers took both champion and reserve honors. His champion heifer, named JC Miss Savior 100R, is a Savior daughter, and his reserve champion was sired by a son of Extra.

In Shorthorn competition, judge Linthicum once again came home to Maryland, naming a Steck's Generator daughter shown by Richard Hodiak of Woodbine, as his champion female.

Doug Goodwin of Lewisburg, W.Va., took reserve grand champion honors with his 1,225-pound champion Chianina-bred steer. Doug's dad, Bill Goodwin, shares the moment.

Here's how the top heifer entries stacked up:

Champion Angus: Molly Cooper, Ohio

Reserve Champion Angus: Mark Moxley, Md.

Champion Chianina: Jamie Kohr, Pa.

NOTICE OF AMENDMENT OF AVIAN INFLUENZA QUARANTINE MEASURES

This document amends the quarantine measures established June 8 1984 by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture for the control and eradication of Lethal Avian Influenza in the Com monwealth of Pennsylvania

All Flocks of domestic poultry in the areas under general quarantine having virological or serological and epidemiological evidence of pathogenic avian influenza have been depopulated

Rigorous surveillance of the areas under general quarantine has been maintained since December 1983

Pathogenic avian influenza virus has not been shown to exist anywhere in the Commonwealth since March 31, 1984

Scientific investigations of recovered avian in fluenza infected flocks (seropositive) have not discovered the presence of latent avian influenza virus

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture concludes that it is no longer necessary to restrict the intrastate movement of domestic poultry poultry products or other birds

Notice is hereby given that the general quarantine order established November 4 1983, as amended November 16, 1983, November 21, 1983 December 27 1983, February 29, 1984 and June 8 1984, is rescinded effective October 4, 1984

Emergency rules for administration of Special Quarantine of flocks and premises infected with or suspicious of avian influenza will remain in effect as amended until further notice

Amendments of the quarantine notices published February 25, 1984 in Lancaster Farming, Penn sylvania Bulletin, Vol 14 No 18, May 5, 1984 and Lancaster Farming on June 9, 1984 consist of recision of the provisions for general quarantine, establishment of quarantine restrictions for poultry poultry products and premises depending upon the pathogenicity of the infecting virus and establish ment of criteria for release of special quarantine

The purpose of these quarantine rules is to restrict the intrastate movement of live poultry and other birds, poultry products and other articles related to the production, marketing or disposal of those avian products from flocks and premises which are infected with, suspicious of or exposed to avian influenza These quarantine actions are pursuant to the declaration by Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell on November 4, 1983, that avian influenza was a dangerous transmissible viral disease of poultry subject to quarantine action (November 4, 1983 Pennsylvania Bulletin, Vol 13, No 45)

EFECTIVE DATE

This document becomes effective October 4, 1984 The quarantine and procedures apply to all actions pursuant to authority granted to the Penn sylvania Department of Agriculture by the Act of 1929, April 17, P L 533, the Act of 1913, July 22, P L 928, the Act of 1929, March 28, the Act of 1929, April 9, P L 177, No 175, Section XVII

Further information may be obtained contacting Dr Max A Van Buskirk, Jr Director Bureau of Animal Industry, telephone (717) 783 5301

AVIAN INFLUENZA QUARANTINE RESTRICTIONS

Pursuant to the authority granted to the Penn sylvania Department of Agriculture by the Act of 1929, April 17, P L 533, the Act of 1913 July 22, P L 928, the Act of 1929, March 28, P L 110 and appropriate amendments to said Acts and Ad ministrative Code of 1929, April 9 P L 177, No 175, Section XVII and in conjunction with the determination by the United States Department of Agriculture that an emergency situation exists [9 CFR Part 81] the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture imposes the following quarantine rules and regulations to prevent the spread of avian in fluenza

Reduction or removal of the General Quarantine area established March 15 1984 is contingent upon maintenance of surveillance of all commercial poultry flocks in that area for 6 months following removal of the state and federal general quarantine Surveillance shall consist of regular collection and submission of appropriate biological tissue and, or environmental specimens from every commercial poultry flock and such other requirements as may be deemed appropriate by the Department for detecting evidence of (H5N2) avian influenza virus

All flocks and premises located within the Com monwealth known to be infected with, exposed to, or suspicious of avian influenza shall be placed under Special Quarantine It shall be unlawful for any owner or person, without a special permit in writing from an officer or agent of the Department of Agriculture, to sell exchange, lease, lend, give away, allow to stray, remove or allow to be removed, any animal or animals, or any products goods, materials, containers, vehicles, cars, conveyances, or other article on property named or described in an order of Special Quarantine (1929, April 17, P L 533 §5)

I Interstate movement of poultry and other birds, poultry products and any other articles related to the production, marketing or disposal of those avian products from flocks or premises quaran tined because of avian influenza shall comply with Part 81 of Title 9 of the Code of Federal Regulations (9 CFR)

II Avian influenza for the purposes of this quarantine action shall be defined as infection of poultry and other birds with H5N2 Type A in fluenza virus

Pathogenic avian influenza shall mean infection of poultry and other birds with H5N2 Type A in fluenza virus which results in the death within 8 days of at least one healthy susceptible chicken 4 to 8 weeks old inoculated by the intramuscular intravenous, or caudal airsac route with bacteria free infectious allantoic or cell culture fluids and using standard operating procedures to assure specificity as determined by the U S D A National Veterinary Services Laboratory

Nonpathogenic avian influenza shall mean in fection of poultry and other birds with H5N2 Type A influenza virus which does not meet the latter mortality criteria for pathogenicity

Avian influenza serological positive birds shall mean birds which have developed circulating antibody in response to infection with H5N2 Type A influenza virus

Intrastate movement of poultry and other birds poultry products and other articles related to production marketing or disposal of those avian products from flocks or premises quarantined because of avian influenza shall be subject to the following restrictions

A No domestic poultry or poultry products in cluding but not limited to chickens ducks, geese turkey pigeons exotic fowl and game birds raised in capitivity shall be moved from quarantined premises except by permit of Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture

1 No birds, eggs poultry products, manure, litter or other contaminated material shall be removed from flocks or premises quarantined by the Department because of infection with, or suspicion of pathogenic avian influenza

2 Permit may be issued for certain movements of poultry, poultry products and associated materials from flocks and premises quaran tined because of nonpathogenic avian in fluenza

a Permit may be issued for controlled movement of eggs to an approved facility for breaking and processing

b In the absence of clinical signs of influenza permit may be issued for the movement of sanitized eggs for table use 30 days following the last isolation of live influenza virus

c In the absence of clinical signs of influenza live birds may be issued permit to move to slaughter 30 days following the last isolation of live influenza virus

3 Permits may be issued for controlled movements of poultry poultry products and associated materials from flocks or premises quarantined because of the presence of avian influenza antibody In the absence of clinical or other epidemiological evidence of active in fection with 30 days in the flock, poultry, poultry products and associated materials may be moved from the premises with the knowledge and express permission of the consignee

4 Disposal of dead poultry, cull eggs refuse, litter and other contaminated articles originating from premises quarantined because of avian influenza shall be only according to instructions issued by the Department

5 Vehicles, equipment, crates, cartons and other means of transporting poultry poultry products and associated materials from premises quarantined because of avian in fluenza shall be managed so as to prevent contamination of the route and shall be cleaned and disinfected prior to engaging in further transportation of any articles upon public highways

B Quarantine of premises and flocks infected with avian influenza may be released when

1 flocks and premises infected with pathogenic avian influenza are depopulated and a all poultry carcasses and parts thereof eggs litter manure and other refuse have been properly disposed of and b the premises have been cleaned and disinfected and rid of insect and rodent vectors in accordance with protocol established by the Department and c no live poultry are taken onto the premises for a 30 day period after Department ap proval of C&D

2 flocks and premises quarantined because of nonpathogenic avian influenza are a depopulated and the premises are certified cleaned and disinfected according to stan dards established by the Department or b the flock has sero converted negative and there have been no clinical signs or epidemiologic evidence of avian influenza virus for at least 30 days or

c if a statistically significant number of in fluenza susceptible sentinels remain seronegative 30 days after placement in the flock and there have been no clinical signs or other epidemiological evidence of avian in fluenza for at least 60 days

3 flocks and premises quarantined because of avian influenza antibody are a depopulated and the premises cleaned and disinfected or b the flock has sero converted negative and there have been no clinical signs or epidemiological evidence of avian influenza for at least 30 days or

c if a statistically significant number of in fluenza susceptible sentinels remain seronegative 30 days after placement in the flock and there is no other epidemiologic evidence of active infection in the flock

4 hatcheries quarantined because of con tamination with avian influenza virus are depopulated and a all eggs and other contaminated refuse are properly disposed of and b the premises are cleaned and disinfected and fumigated in accordance with Depart ment protocol

C Birds may not be added to flocks or brought onto premises quarantined for avian influenza except by permit of the Department Additions to quarantined flocks without permit of the Department may result in condemnation of any part of or all of the flocks and forfeiture of any right to indemnity from the Department for condemned birds in the flock concerned Ad ditions to quarantined flocks without permit may also result in cancellation of permits to move poultry or poultry products from such flocks

Pa. dairy farm profits

Milk price down

Gross sales of milk from Pennsylvania dairy farms changed only slightly last year compared to 1982. Sales per cow averaged $1,795 in 1983 and $1,804 in 1982. Milk production per cow on the farms studied averaged 14,119 pounds last year compared to 13,780 pounds the previous year. The increased milk flow resulted in stable dollar sales despite a decline of 38 cents per cwt. in 1983 prices.

The effect of drought in 1983 was reflected in forage and grain yields. Yields of corn for grain average 20 bushels per acre less than 1982. Corn silage yields were down 3 tons per acre. Hay yields declined less than one-half ton per acre. Farmers harvested an extra 11 acres for forage and an additional 6 acres for grain in 1983 compared to the previous year.

Financially Secure

The financial position of the 800 Pennsylvania dairy producers included in this study is secure. The ratio of net worth to total assets used in the business was 62.9 in 1983. Thus, for eawch $100 invested in the business, there is operator equity of nearly $63.

New worth among dairy operations decreased somewhat last year. That reduction averaged about $13,000 per farm. Total assets managed on the farms is approximately $320,000. Thus, the change in net worth represents 4 percent of total assets. Most of the reductions in net worth is explained by the reduced inventory of feed at the end of the year.

Farm debt on Pennsylvania dairy farms last year increased slightly by an average of only $2,277 per farm.

Farm Records Essential

The experience of Pennsylvania dairy farmers last year indicates the importance of accurate and complete farm records in providing a true picture of farm earnings. If one included only cash income and expense, 1983 would appear to be a reasonably good year in terms of dairy farm income. The difference between cash income and cash expense in 1983 averaged more than $30,000 or $500 per cow. That figure exceeds the difference between income and expense for 1982.

Most dairy producers will verify that 1982 was a better year financially that 1983. The inconsistency is caused by the failure to account for inventory change and overhead costs when only cash income and expense are considered. Complete records are essential as a source of information for adjusting cash income and expense. These adjustments are necessary if the manager wants an accurate analysis of net farm earnings.

Farm records also help the farm operator to accurately report depreciation and other deductions on the federal tax return. Those deductions reduce taxable income and thus the amount of tax paid.

certain – there is no justification for the expenditures that have been made in the past to store excess dairy products.

And, dairy concerns were also expressed in other ways at the session held at the Gettysburg Sheraton.

In his prepared remarks, Delano said:

"If farmers keep disagreeing among themselves...

"If one part of the program overshadows the others...

"If costs for one segment of agriculture are clearly out of line...

"Then the bureaucrats in Washington will write the kind of farm program they want and leave divided farm opinion out of it."

And, one of seven policy resolutions passed by the Adams County Farmers Association asked that Penn State trustees be more representative of all segments of agriculture — not just dairy.

Other resolutions called for restrictions on apple concentrate imports, protection of contract poultry growers under the proposed egg marketing order and protection of farmers from chemical pollution harrassment suits.

Besides the marketplace orientation of the new Farm Bill, Delano said there will probably only be "tinkering" with other phases of ag legislation.

"A great deal of support is developing," Delano said, "in Washington and elsewhere, for setting loan rates in the new program according to a formula that reflects changes in supply, market demand and other economic conditions.

"The idea would be to tie loan rates to a percentage – perhaps 75 to 85 percent of average market prices over a five-year period – with the high and low years removed.

..."We must not allow target prices to unduly stimulate increased production."

Concerning dairy, Delano believes that supports must be tied to government purchases of surpluses – the higher the purchases, the lower the supports.

"But Congress doesn't want farmers to get together, it likes us divided," he said in calling for more attention to the interdependency of the many segments of agriculture on each other.

Delano believes that farmers, despite current economic problems, are better off in the long run today. Producing for the marketplace is better than producing for the government, he said. But concern still remains about the large federal deficit and its effect on interest rates for ag borrowing.

In other matters, the Adams County Farmers Association elected some directors and delegates to the upcoming PFA annual meeting.

Johnny Cash concert set

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Farm Show Commission has announced that national Country and Western Star Johnny Cash and his wife June Carter Cash are the feature act for the Farm Show Youth Benefit Concert set for Saturday, December 1, at 8 p.m. in the Farm Show Arena.

Known for such hits as "I Walk The Line," "Folsom Prison Blues," and "If I Were A Carpenter," the pair will bring their musical repertoire to Harrisburg to benefit 4-H and Future Farmers of America farm youth activities and program improvements at the Farm Show Complex.

Commission members, including State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell, gave final approval for the concert at their Sept. 28 meeting.

Tickets for the Youth Benefit affair are $10 and $12.50 and may be purchased at the Farm Show Ticket Office, 2301 North Cameron Street, beginning October 15. Tickets may also be obtained by writing to Johnny Cash Show, P.O. Box 158, Mechanicsburg, PA 17055-0158, or by calling 717-783-6513.

The governor, State House and Senate all issued proclamations designating October as Co-op Month. From the left are William F. Matson, general manager, Pa. Rural Electric Assn.; State Sen. Noah Wenger; Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell; and PAFC President Ward Cooper.

Future of co-ops

cooperatives and to acknowledge the many contributions that these special institutions make to the economy and development of our state and nation."

In similar resolutions, unanimously adopted by the Pennsylvaia State Senate and the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, it was pointed out that one of every four Americans belongs to member-owned cooperatives. In Pennsylvania there are over 1,000 farmer cooperatives, providing more than $1 billion in goods and services to over 72,000 Pennsylvania farmer cooperative members. Sen. Noah Wenger presented the Senate resolution to PAFC officials.

In a public affairs symposium on the voice of farmer cooperatives in the future, State Rep. David Wright, read a similar resolution passed by the House.

Wright told those attending the PAFC annual meeting that cooperatives play an important role in the future, saying, "We do together what we cannot do separately. Co-ops in the aggregate form are a substantial force."

He told co-op members that they cannot expect something wonderful to happen without working hard to achieve results. He said, "The future of farming demand commitment to research and development." He also called for inceased marketing in such a way that products will have multiple uses.

Wright said, "The future is bright; there is no need to be pessimistic. Although there may be hard times ahead, he said in the long haul the future is optimistic. He concluded, "If some of us don't farm all of the time then all of us would have to farm some of the time."

Other speakers on the panel were optimistic about the future of farming, but candid about the role cooperatives must play.

Dr. Gene Swackhamer, president of Farm Credit Banks of Baltimore, pointed out, "We don't understand the magnitude of the adjustment (in the economy) taking place. Agriculture is not on the wave of the recovery."

He told the co-op members that co-ops cannot be all things to all people, saying, "Co-ops must recognize that they can't continue to provide members with all services and all products." He said they will have to look at divisions which don't make sense, and added that while all services may not be profitable, the end result must be profitable to the co-op.

He predicted that there will be many consolidations and mergers ahead for co-ops saying that studies show there will be fewer co-ops in the future serving larger geographical areas.

Swackhamer said there has been an erosion of member base and loyalty, and that the number of farmers declining co-op loyalty is also declining. He said many farmers have not been farming long enough to understand or appreciate the contributions of their cooperatives. He added, "Loyalty is a condition of the heart; commitment is a condition of the pocketbook." He urged co-ops to seek commitments from their members.

Most co-ops need to develop sounder business policies, adding that many co-ops are undercapitalized. He pointed out, however, that he is optimistic about the future. "Co-ops have the resources, the potential markets and the determination to succeed."

Wayne Boutwell, president of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, discussed the farm bill which must be written in 1985. He set the stage for the needs of the new bill by pointing out that in 1930, some 25 percent of the population of the United States lived and worked on farms with an average acreage of 151. Today he said there are 3.5 percent living and working on farms which average 437 acres. In 1930 one out of ten acres was exported, and in 1982, two out of five acres was exported.

Despite the decrease in real figures, Boutwell noted that agriculture represents one fifth of the GNP, one fourth of the exports and one fifth of the foreign exchange earnings of the country.

Exports have been declining, Boutwell said, because of the world recession, the strong dollar and increased foreign production, as well as the inflexibility of the farm program.

The result has been surpluses, low prices and low farm income and declining land prices.

Boutwell explained that if the 1985 farm bill is not signed into law, farm policy will revert to the 1938 agricultural adjustment act and in 1949 admendment.

Boutwell said that historically the policy guiding the farm program has been to support farm income and prices; maintain adequate supplies of food and fiber; and assure the orderly marketing and distribution of products. He said he feels that a fourth policy should be added to assure U.S. competitiveness in the world markets. He said, "The competition is better at farming our farm programs than we are."

In an effort to get away from more government controls as an option and the total free market option, Boutwell suggested that the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives is considering a competitive support option, under which the farmer would be made a marketing loan at harvest, with the loan allowed to be repaid at world market price.

This would allow the U.S. to remain competitive world wide, while maintaining adequate support, Boutwell said. He added that it would encourage the competition to adjust the production. The one problem with such a proposal is that it is difficult to estimate the government cost of operating the program.

Co-ops honor Yoder, Doran

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG — David J. Yoder, general manager of Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, and Hal F. Doran, associate professor of agriculture education and agriculture economics extension at Penn State, were recognized at the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives as the group met to kick-off the Co-op Month celebration.

Yoder was selected by the National Planning Committee of Cooperative Month to be honored as a "eooperative hero" for his career achievements with cooperatives. The award is intended for the cooperative leader whose life's work or a major portion thereof, has been devoted to the work of cooperatives.

In presenting the award, PAFC president Ward Cooper, said the award was presented because "Yoder has exemplified the ideals of the cooperative way of doing business in his ability to lead with foresight, using sound business principles and never losing his philosophy of 'members first' in carrying out cooperative policy."

He said that Yoder's dedication and cooperative leadership have gone beyond Atlantic Breeders Cooperative to active leadership roles in the Pennsyvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives, the AI industry and local civic, service and church organizations.

Yoder began his career with Southeastern Pennsylvania Artificial Breeding Cooperative as a technician in 1944, being named general manager later that same year. When Atlantic merged with Western Pennsylvania Artificial Breeding Cooperative, he was named general manager of the newly formed Atlantic Breeders Cooperative.

In presenting the PAFC Distinguished Service Award to Doran, Cooper said, "PAFC has been able to depend on Hal for everything from brochure design and organizational promotion to philosophical direction of the association. His unique communicating abilities have many times assisted the association in unifying their position on a topic of concern."

Before joining the Penn State staff in 1966, Doran was a personnel manager for the Chemical and Fertilizer Division of Agway in Syracuse. He has done planning, programming and conducting educational programs in the field of agricultural business.

In other business, the following people were elected to serve on PAFC's Board of Directors: Robert M. Dever, assistant general manager of Inter-State Milk Producers Cooperative; Donald A. Widder, general manager of United Electric Cooperative; Wayne D. Baker, director and assistant treasurer of Cumberland Valley Cooperative; James T. Compton, who operates JA-JO farm in Indiana County with his wife Mary Jo; Ray E. McMillen, who runs a dairy operation with his sons in Perry County; and Donald E. Pease, who farms 400 acres in Susquehanna County.

Randall and Paul Meabon, who own Green Meadows Farm near Wattsburg in Erie County, will serve on the Board of Directors as representative of the Co-op Couples, and Andrew M. Rill, an employee of Cumberland Valley Cooperative, will serve as youth representative to the Board.

In other business, the membership of PAFC voted to establish a full time office and hire an executive secreatry to coordinate activities of the group. Currently it is served by a part-time executive secretary with assistance and support from Penn State.

Green Slopes named All-American herdsman

HARRISBURG — Green Slopes Farm of Imler, Bedford County, was named the outstanding herdsman of the 21st Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show last week.

More than 1,300 dairy cows live at the Farm Show Complex during the All-American — they eat and sleep, as well as get milked, clipped and bathed in preparation for their moment in the show ring.

The necessity of encouraging cleanliness prompted the Pennsylvania Dairymen's Association to present each breed with an "Outstanding Herdsman" award at the week's end. Then, one of the six receives the overall honors.

Green Slopes Farm was the Guernsey winner. The remaining breeds and winners were Ayrshire, Scotch Haven Farm of Kirkerville, Ohio; Brown Swiss, Top Acres Farm of St. Paris, Ohio; Holstein, Stookey Holsteins, Inc. of Leesburg, Ind.; Jersey, Cowbell Acres of Canton, N.Y.; and Milking Shorthorn, Kuszmar Farm of Batavia, N.Y.

Unannounced, periodic inspections were made each day, noting such items as stall and animal cleanliness, general attractiveness, sanitary and neat equipment, and courtesy to show visitors.

Daily winners were posted on a blackboard in the main barn outside of the large arena.

than his brother's heifer, Fisher stated." The judge said that she's structurally correct."

The reserve grand champion female went to the champion Hereford of Travis Werley, Shoemakersville.

Lori Rabenold, R4, Kutztown, earned the grand champion fitter title as she exhibited her steer, "Tarzan" With three older brothers, an older sister who is in 4-H, and a supportive father, Rabenold credits her family and their background for many of her numerous showing and fitting honors this past year. Her sister, Karen, took the reserve grand champion market steer honors, while Michele Harley, R2, Douglassville, took the Grand.

In the swine show, Kirk Fisher again took the purple rosettes with his champion pair of market swine. The grand champion swine went to the entry of Steve Rohrbach, Shoemakersville, and the reserve title to Greg Stricker, Bernville.

Fourteen-year-old Karen Stutzman, R1, Kutztown, dominated the sheep show at the Reading Fair. Karen exhibited the grand and reserve grand champion market lambs. She also captured the ribbons for the grand champion pen of lambs.

Demonstrating that she really knew what she was doing, Karen also took the grand champion showman honors in the sheep fitting and showing competition. She was also named reserve champion fitter.

Karen has been in the 4-H sheep club for three years and says this is the first year that she has done this well. "I walk them every day," she says about her two winners, which are the only sheep she has. "It gives them muscle," she adds.

The Stutzman sheep were featured at the annual Berks County 4-H Market Lamb Sale held the final day of the fair, Saturday, Sept. 29th. The 120-pound champion brought $6.10 per pound on the bid from Weaver's Farm Market, Sinking Spring. The reserve champion sold for $3.45 per pound to the Crystal Springs Restaurant, Sinking Spring.

"I'm gonna miss them," Karen commented after the sale. But the annual sale, which provides the 4-H'ers with money for their year-long efforts, gave Karen incentive for next year. "Besides," she adds, "I was thinking of buying a computer."

The market lamb sale included 49 head of the 4-H project sheep. Although the price for the grand champion was down from the $7.50 that the champion brought last year, the sale average for this year was $.15 higher than 1983 at $1.29 per pound.

"The kids were quite pleased," commented the sale clerk. Also, according to the clerk, the buyers really liked the meat after receiving it from the butcher.

Buyers included Lebanon Valley National Bank, Boscov's Department Stores, Rich Brandt Realtor, Shillington IGA, Farm Credit, Van Mar Feeds, Disel Inc., Peters Brothers Meats, All Star Real Estate, John O'Brian, C.P. Rhoads & Son, Reading Speedometer, Bank of Pennsylvania, Yellow House Hotel, Women's Clinic, Leesport Agway, Farm Bureau of Souderton, Boyers Market, Manor Equipment, Hamilton Bank, Columbiam Cutlery, Dr. Jim Diamond, Kantner Tire Service, and the National Bank of Boyertown.

Little country store offers big bargains

BY SUZANNE KEENE

MOUNT JOY — An unobtrusive sign at the end of a long, stoney farm lane bordered with rows of corn marks the entrance of the "The Country Store" near Mount Joy. An inattentive motorist could easily drive by and miss the little shop that lies at the end of the lane, but many stop to pick up some flour, sugar, meat, cheese or other groceries.

When James and Lillian Zimmerman opened the doors of their store seven years ago, some days few customers came, while other days no one came. Now, they say, an average of 50 customers a day find their way down that long farm lane.

Many of the customers, Lillian said, come to purchase baking supplies, which she sells at bargain prices in both small and large quantities.

The most popular items, she says, are raisins, brown sugar and spices. For kids, the candy shelf is one of the biggest attractions.

Lillian says she is able to offer her products at reduced prices by purchasing flours, sugars, spices, dried fruits, nutritional snack mixes, meats and cheeses in bulk and then repackaging them.

She purchases spices in five pound boxes, then repackages them into ¼-pound containers, passing on an almost 50 percent savings to her customers. While not all the savings are that great, most things cost less at the Country Store than they do in the supermarket, Lillian said.

"Anything you order in quantity, you get it for less," Lillian remarked, estimating that she saves about 20 cents per pound when purchasing items in bulk quantity.

"Those little things make a difference," she continued.

Lillian Zimmerman checks out Fran Stauffer, one of her neighbors, in the small store she runs out of a farmhouse.

Many of her products are available in a variety of package sizes, ranging from ½ pound to 25 pounds. "There are also people who want 100 pounds of flour," she said, noting that the larger the order, the greater the savings to the customer.

Lillian handles most of the responsibilty for the store, and James is in charge of the farm's 90 head of steers.

However, James does help out with the store, doing much of the banking, helping with the packaging and assisting customers when things get really busy. "He helps me out when I'm in need," Lillian says with an appreciative glance toward her husband.

The Zimmermans have four children - Jamson, 10; Angela, 8; Donovan, 5; and Crystal, 2. Jamson and Angela help out with the packaging and write labels. "It gives them practice in their penmanship," Lillian said.

Angela especially enjoys waiting on customers and they all like to sample the candy.

Opening a country store in their rented farmhouse was originally Lillian's idea. One of her mother's neighbors had a similar store in Ephrata, and when the neighbor went out of business, she shared her business knowledge with Lillian.

"She kind of passed things on to me and gave me the things I needed," Lillian said.

Before she opened her own store, Lillian said she used to visit her

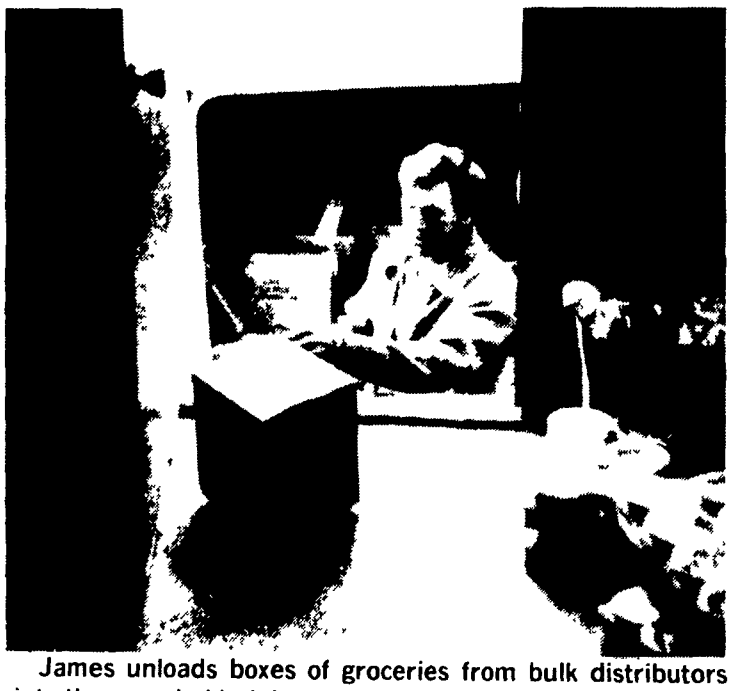
Homestead Notes



James unloads boxes of groceries from bulk distributors into the room behind the store where the Zimmermans do the repackaging and labeling.

Lillian does most of the work in the store herself, including stocking the shelves.

Packing food in smaller quantities is a family affair. Here, James and Lillian get some help from Angela and Donovan.

The store also offers fresh lunchmeats and cheeses. Here, Lillian slices some bologna for a customer.

Ladies Have You Heard?

By Doris Thomas

Lancaster Extension Home Economist

PARENTS CAN HELP CHILDREN IMPROVE SCHOOL WORK

A look at last year's report cards may make both you and your child resolve to see better grades this year. However, you may not know how to help your child because you may not know what is causing the problem.

High distractibility is the one trait most responsible for poor school performance. Take time to find out now, early in the school year, whether or not this is the problem. If it is, you, your child and the teacher can work out some at-home strategies to improve school work.

Recognize that your child has a certain learning style and is influenced by his or her own personality characteristics. Some children can get right down to homework after school, motivated to finish so they can go out and play. Others need some active playing time or even some resting time before they can settle down.

You can help your child learn more efficiently by showing that you have a respect for learning. Provide a place for your child to study undisturbed. This area should have adequate table space and good lighting. You may want to set aside some agreed upon "homework time" based on your child's age and the amount of homework assigned. Once again, it may be helpful to discuss this with your child's teacher.

PUT TOGETHER A STAIN REMOVAL KIT

It is an axiom that stains are easier to remove from fabrics when treated promptly. The longer the stain remains, the more difficult it becomes to remove. But whether they are taken care of promptly or before laundering the items, stains generally require special attention. Many stains will come out in the wash, especially if good laundering techniques are used. Some, however, are more complex and call for pretreatment.

So put together a first aid kit for stain removal and be ready for inevitable spots and spills. Start with a stain removal chart. Of course, there are a number of laundry products and aids you may have on hand that can be used in treating some stains – detergent, soap, bleach – chlorine or oxygen, enzyme presoak, prewash soil and stain remover and detergent boosters. Other products stocked in most homes that are also helpful in removing certain stains include ammonia, baking soda and white vinegar. Stain removers that should be part of the kit include a rust remover and solvents such as cleaning fluid, denatured alcohol, rubbing alcohol, turpentine, mineral spirits. Add supplies such as clean, lint-free cloths; paper towels; sponge; brush; dull knife; measuring cup and spoons. Store the kit in the laundry area, ready for use, but out of reach of children.

The Country Store

mother and return with items from the store for all her neighbors. "I'd come home with a car or a truck load," she said.

While business started out slow and sporadic, James and Lillian did not abandon their enterprise. Looking back, Lillian said she wonders how they managed to "hang in there."

However, the Zimmermans were swamped with customers during their first anniversary sale. "We didn't expect such a good turnout," Lillian said. "After the first day we had the sale, the shelves were bare."

Last year, their anniversary sale drew about 200 customers a day. Lillian hires a full-time employee to help during the anniversary sale and during the busy months of November and December, and her sister helps out whenever she's needed. During the summer Lillian hires a part-time helper.

Lillian said she has helped a number of others start stores like her own. Her advice to them was not to order too much at the beginning.

"If you order too heavily, then things set on the shelf too long," she said. Offering fresh items is an important part of running a successful shop, she noted.

Knowing how much and what to order is a skill that comes with experience. "I got a lot better," Lillian said. "You never really know exactly how much you'll need, but you can always reorder if you run out."

Experience has taught her that shelves stocked full are more attractive to customers than scantily supplied ones.

Lillian's pleasant personality and her willingness to do special favors for her neighbors is probably another reason why her venture has been so successful. Recently, she prepared an all-natural shoo-fly pie for a neighbor as a special order.

"I'll do special things like that for people," she says.

While the store and the bargains it offers attract the customers, the farm setting helps to keep them coming back. The Zimmermans raise turkeys and usually give one away during each day of their anniversary sale in November. However, this year, the avian flu epidemic that plagued Lancaster County prevented them from raising any this year.

In addition to the turkeys, the Zimmermans also have a peacock, which customers can usually catch a glimpse of as it struts in the yard, a pony, steers, lots of cats and a swing for the kids.

"People like to see those kinds of things," Lillian observed, noting that she believes that is part of the reason her store has been so successful.

In the spring, the Zimmermans will be moving to a new location, because the farm they rent in Mount Joy has been sold. However, they say they plan to stay in the same area and continue the store.

But in the meantime, they will be busily bagging flour and sugar in preparation for the holiday rush that will be here before long.

Sullivan Co. plans Foliage Festival

DUSHORE — The annual Flaming Foliage Festival of Sullivan County, sponsored by the Sullivan County Chamber of Commerce, will be held at the fairgrounds (Rt. 154) in Forksville on Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 13 and 14, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Woodsmens' Day will start on Saturday at 12:30 p.m. with demonstrations of lumbering events by a Clinton County lumberjack team led by James McGuire, Jr. The contests for men, women and children will begin at 1 p.m. with the follow-events planned - crosscut sawing, ax throwing, chain saw (18 & over), log rolling, speed chopping (experienced only), pulp throwing and dot splitting.

Also on Saturday the Sullivan Wilds 25 Mile Competitive Ride will be held. This is an Eastern Competitive Trail Ride Association event sponsored by the Pennsylvania Arabian Horse Association, North-Central East Division. Nearly 50 horses and riders, will be seen during the day as the ride starts and ends on the fairgrounds.

The Antique Gas Engine Show will be held both days with an increased number of exhibitors showing many sizes of "Old-time" make and break gasoline engines performing such tasks as butter churning, grain grinding, wood-cutting and operating other old equipment. Antique cars will also be on display.

The Craftsmen of the Endless Mountains, a regional group of craft persons dedicated to quality crafts, will be featured at the annual craft show and sale. Many other craft persons will be present also for the two-day show.

Displays and demonstrations of various crafts will be on going in the Exhibit Building. Members of the Old Fashioned Quilters of Sullivan County will be showing and demonstrating.

There will be food and other entertainment for visitors to this festival which is held during the beautiful autumn foliage season in Sullivan County of the Endless Mountains region.

Information about the Flaming Foliage Festival or other events in Sullivan County may be obtained by contacting the sullivan County Chamber of Commerce, Box 1C Dushore PA 18614.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Patiently, he again shows me the proper motions.

"No Mom. Like this." I try, but my efforts fall short of the perfectionist demands in executing the moves, as done by our 12-year-old.

"I guess you're just not flexible enough," he sighs.

Indeed. Contrary to what he believes, it wasn't really Michael Jackson, but farmers, who originated America's current dance rage based on erratic moves and sudden, jerking motions.

I'm talking moonwalking and poppin' here, folks. You know, like "breakin'."

You don't believe that break dancing really began out here on the nation's farms? Think about it.

Take moon walking, for instance. That smooth, seemingly effortless backwards gliding motion of the feet wasn't invented for the sole purpose of filming TV commercials. Heck, no.

Actually, the unique retreating dance step first saw light of day one morning in the mountainous upstate, when a local farm wife there meandered out to pick blackberries and nearly stumbled over this big ole' four-foot rattlesnake just snoozing away in the sun.

It was my brother who devised the breakdance arm movement which begins with a dip of the fingers on one hand, continuing with a wavelike motion through that arm, and on out the other, disappearing at the end of the opposite hand.

He perfected the move at about age eight, when a certain wise-guy sister suggested he check to see if a neighborhood electric fence really was on. It was - and he took his curtain call bows from the seat of his pants in the middle of a pasture, from the volt jolt, while screaming death threats to a certain older sibling rolling on the ground with laughter.

Other break dance jerking hand movements likewise originated with farmers, trying to give their reluctant wives instructions on towing machinery. These hand signals were the only way to convey information over the diesel's whine and wifely sobbing.

Similar random erratic jerking motions find frequent practice around farms. I'm perfecting one right now, called the halt and leap, useful at night for avoiding falling into the hole in the blacktop, dug up when a band of maurauding rats blockaded a drain pipe with rip-rap.

Similar in execution is the abrupt stop-and-turn movement that comes into play when a nail on the corner of a gate snags your sweatshirt, as you try to run interference against an offensive lineup of 4-H heifers scrambling for an alfalfa field goal.

Last, but not least, is my personal favorite, the flambouyant, challenging - and yes, dangerous - shoulder spins. While pieces of linoleum are favored by most breakdancers, we prefer the blacktopped slope to the milkhouse, polished to a sheen with an invisible sheet of ice lovingly laid down by a bone-chilling January fog.

This move is best launched from a standing position, wearing well-worn duck shoes with rubber tread bottoms best resembling "bald" tires. While exhilarating, it leaves old inflexibles - we won't mention any names - with black and blue blotches. Or worse.

And that, in case you haven't figured it out yet, is why it's called "break" dancing.

Try a new chicken recipe

Most freezers contain at least one chicken hiding among the packages of garden vegetables that occupied so many hours this summer.

Because it can be prepared in so many ways and is suitable for nearly every occasion, chicken has long been a favorite of both cooks and guests.

If, like most people, you have a few treasured chicken recipes that occupy the premier spots in your recipe file, it may be time to add a new one - or two. Don't, of course, abandon those old favorites, but do try some of the recipes below; you may find one you like.

CHICKEN SALAD CASSEROLE

2 cups cubed, cooked chicken
1 small green pepper, sliced
1 small can mushrooms, drained
½ cup slivered water chestnuts
1 can french fried onion rings
¼ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup skim milk
Little salt

Preheat oven to 350°F. Simmer green pepper slices until tender. Drain. Combine milk with mayonnaise. Add green pepper, mushrooms, water chestnuts, chicken and salt.

Place in 1½-quart casserole and top with onion rings. Cover and bake 30 minutes. Remove cover and bake 5 minutes longer to crisp the onion rings. Makes 4 servings. Leftovers can be eaten cold.

CRISPY FRIED CHICKEN

2½ to 3 pounds cut up frying chicken (or chicken parts) and enough Crisco for deep frying.
Seasoned Flour:
1½ cups all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon garlic salt
1½ teaspoons black pepper
1½ teaspoons paprika
¼ teaspoon poultry seasoning

Combine ingredients and set aside.

Crispy Batter:
⅔ cup all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1 beaten egg yolk
¾ cup flat beer or water

Combine flour and seasonings in medium bowl. Combine egg yolk and beer or water. Add gradually to dry ingredients. Heat Crisco to 365°F. in deep saucepan or deep fryer to a depth of 2 inches. Moisten chicken pieces. Dip in seasoned flour, then batter, then back in seasoned flour. Fry in hot Crisco for 15 to 18 minutes or until well done. Drain on paper. Makes 4 servings.

If you want gravy from this chicken, cook the chicken first before frying. Don't deep fry the chicken as long. Just until golden brown.

CLASSIC CHICKEN KIEV

3 broiler-fryer chicken breasts, halved, boned and skinned
6 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon chopped chives
½ teaspoon garlic powder
½ teaspoon tarragon
¼ cup flour
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup fine fresh bread crumbs
½ teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
2 cups cooking oil, approximately

Cut butter in 1 tablespoon pieces. In small bowl, mix together chives, garlic power and tarragon. Roll each piece of butter in seasoning mixture, turning to coat thoroughly. Refrigerate butter until cold and firm. Place chicken breast halves on hard surface. With meat mallet or similar flattening utensil, gently pound chicken to ¼-inch thickness. Place 1 piece of seasoned butter on each chicken breast half; roll up, envelope fashion, and secure with string or food picks. Sprinkle each chicken roll with flour, then dip in beaten egg. Roll chicken in bread crumbs until thoroughly coated; sprinkle with salt and pepper and chill for at least 30 minutes.

In deep fryer, place cooking oil, filling to no more than ⅓ full. Heat to medium temperature (about 360°F.). Add chicken, a few pieces at a time, and cook about 6 minutes, or until golden brown and fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Makes 6 servings.

LITTLE CHICKEN DINNERS

½ pound bulk pork sausage
¼ cup butter or margarine
⅓ cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 cups chicken broth
1 cup light cream
1 3-ounce can chopped mushrooms
2 cups cut-up cooked chicken
Pastry rounds (below)

Shape sausage into 1-inch balls. In medium skillet, brown balls; remove and drain. Pour fat from skillet. Melt butter over low heat; stir in flour and salt until mixture is bubbly. Remove from heat. Stir in broth, cream and mushrooms (with liquid). Heat to boiling, stirring constantly. Boil and stir 1 minute.

Heat oven to 425°F. Divide chicken, sausage and sauce into 6 ungreased individual baking dishes. Place one Pastry Round on each dish; fold pastry under, even with edge of dish. Flute. Cut slits on top. Place dishes on baking sheet; cover with aluminum foil. Remove foil last 10 minutes of baking. Bake 30 minutes or until crust is brown. Insert pastry chicken in each baking dish. Serves 6.

Pastry Rounds

Prepare pastry for two crust pie. Roll to 1/8-inch thick; cut into rounds 2 inches larger than tops of baking dishes. Roll remaining pastry ¼ inch thick. Cut into chicken shapes. Place on ungreased baking sheet; insert wooden pick in each chicken. Bake 15 to 20 minutes.

CHICKEN ASPARAGUS STRATA

1 whole broiler-fryer chicken, cooked, boned, skinned and cut in bite-size pieces
⅓ cup chopped onion
⅓ cup chopped celery
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon poultry seasoning
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ cup mayonnaise
8 slices whole wheat bead, crusts removed, cubed, divided
1 14½-ounce can cut asparagus, drained
4 eggs, beaten
3 cups milk
1 cup grated sharp Cheddar cheese

Place chicken in a deep saucepan. Add 2 cups water, 1 small sliced onion, 3 celery tops, 1 teaspoon salt, and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Cover and simmer about 45 minutes or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Remove chicken from pan and cool. When cool, remove meat from bones and cut in bite-size pieces. Discard bones, skin and broth or reserve for another use. In medium bowl mix together chicken, onion, celery, lemon juice, salt, poultry seasoning and pepper; mix well, then fold in mayonnaise. In large, deep greased refrigerator-to-oven baking dish evenly sprinkle one-half of bread cubes. Spread chicken mixture over bread cubes; add asparagus and then remaining bread cubes. In small bowl, beat eggs and milk together; pour over asparagus, bread cubes and chicken. Cover and refrigerate for at least 4 hours. Bake at 325°F. for 15 minutes. Remove from oven, sprinkle with cheese and return to oven to 50 more minutes. Makes 6 servings.

CHICKEN A LA KING

3½ cups noodles
1 can cream of chicken soup

Featured Recipe

This week's featured recipe comes from 1984 Candy Queen Nancy Hartz. A secretary at Wilbur Chocolate Factory in Lititz, Nancy says she enjoys promoting the industry she works for.

When she can find the time in her busy schedule, Nancy enjoys making her own candy. The Peanut Butter Fudge recipe below is one of her favorites. To learn more about Nancy and her promotional activities, see the story featuring her in this section.

Peanut Butter Fudge

2 cups sugar
1 cup milk
2 cups marshmallow cream
1 12-ounce jar crunchy peanut butter
1 teaspoon vanilla

Combine sugar and milk; bring to a boil. Stir for 5 minutes over medium heat to a soft boil (238°F.) Remove from heat and stir in marshmallow, peanut butter and vanilla. Beat until well blended. Pour into a greased 9-inch square pan. Cut into squares.

Montgomery Co. to observe 4-H Week

NORRISTOWN — 4-H members in Montgomery County are joining the nearly five million young people nationwide in observing National 4-H Week, Oct. 7-13.

Using the theme, "4-H Building on Experience," members are challenged to use their own, as well as others' experiences and expertise in acquiring practical skills. They also are learning good health habits, developing respect for themselves and others, exploring career and lesiure time opportunities, sharing responsibilities for preserving the environment, and developing leadership and citizenship skills.

Extension agent Helaine Brown said that during the special week members of America's largest out-of-school youth education organization will celebrate with activities aimed at promoting individual growth and accomplishment, creativity, social responsibility, and family involvement.

In Montgomery County, there are almost 300 volunteer leaders working with 2,800 4-H members. These volunteers are among the more than 620,000 leaders nationwide, who each contributed about 220 hours of service last year.

4-H conducted by the cooperative extension service at Penn State University, is available to boys and girls 9 to 19 wherever they live. Programs are conducted in the 3,150 counties of the United States, plus the district of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam. Since its inception, about 45 million Americans have been involved in 4-H. In addition, some 82 countries around the world have youth programs similar to 4-H.

4-H thrives because of a unique partnership with the public and private sectors who contribute at the local, state, and national level. Not only does this partnership include financial support, but many business men and women volunteer their time and talents to young people, as well, Brown said.

For more information on how you might be involved in 4-H, as a member or volunteer leader, contact Helaine Brown, 400 Markley Street, Norristown, PA 19401 or call 277-0574.

Leslie Tyler wins Bob Evans horse

NEWARK, Del. — Fifteen-year-old Leslie Tyler has been raising horses nearly half her life. Now, finally, she has one of her own. Her newly acquired, five-month-old quarter horse weanling, Bekays Bar (more familiarly known as Justin), was a gift from famous sausage-maker and restaurateur Bob Evans.

Each year Evans holds a western-style roundup, complete with campfires and trail rides, on his 1,100-acre farm in Ohio. To this event he invites one lucky 4-H teenager from each of the 10 states where his products are sold. Those teenagers, chosen by their respective states for citizenship and exemplary performance in the 4-H horse project, return with their own quarter horse weanlings.

Leslie, the youngest of four daughters of Helen and Ronald Tyler, lives with her family on a horse farm located between Glasgow and Middletown. Ronald Tyler started "Tyloria Acres" as a sideline while working for the Chrysler Corporation. Now that he is retired, the horse farm is the family's full-time business.

The Tylers breed and raise horses for sale, give riding lessons, and train animals for others. One standardbred horse they broke went on to a successful racing career.

Leslie has participated in all phases of the family enterprise. A six-year member of the 4-H horse project, she has trained and shown several horses, but all either belonged to someone else or were destined for later sale. Justin is the first horse that is hers alone.

Leslie is very pleased with Justin. He's a pleasant, easy-tempered young animal, a sorrel with four white socks. She plans to show him at the state 4-H horse show and the Delaware State Fair. She won't be able to ride him until he is two years old, but for now she's having a good time grooming him, teaching him to stand properly, and taking him along while she jogs around the neighborhood. At his tender age she's careful not to work him longer than 15 minutes at a time.

Leslie's skill with horses is evident in her assured handling of Justin and from the many trophies and ribbons she's won for showing and judging. She won first place for two consecutive years in the 4-H county horse judging competition. She also took the English pleasure championship at the 4-H horse show in 1982, and the hunter horse reserve championship in 1983. As a junior 4-H leader, she also helps younger members with their riding and judging.

Leslie's older sister, Denise, is studying animal science at the University of Delaware, and plans to make horses her career. Leslie, who is studying drafting at Delcastle High School, looks forward to a career in engineering, but is certain that horses will always be an important part of her life.

Extension schedules Energy Conservation series

FLEMINGTON, N.J. — It is not too early to be thinking about "Old Man Winter." Are you and your home ready for winter? You can find out by attending the "Home Energy Conservation Series." This program, to be held on four consecutive Thursdays beginning Oct. 11, will feature timely topics.

Join us the first night to listen to Dr. Joseph Ponessa, Rutgers Extension Specialist in Housing and Energy, talk on "Simple Maintenance of Home Heating Systems."

The second night, Oct. 18, Dr. Ponessa will present a program on "Indoor Air Pollution...Is Your Home Too Tight? Oct. 25 will feature Nancy Crutchfield, extension home economist, and "Window Warm-ups," window treatments to cut down on heat loss in winter. During second half of the same evening County Ag Agent Elaine Barbour will present a program on "Landscaping for Energy Conservation."

The last evening in the series, Nov. 1, will highlight woodburning stoves with Martin Decker, Rutgers extension specialist in safety and Cal Wettstein, senior county agent. Dick Townsend of the Clinton Energy Center will also talk about coal burning stoves. These stoves will be on display.

All programs will be held at the extension services building, along Route 31, just north of the Hunterdon Medical Center in Flemington.

All programs are two hours long and will start promptly at 7:30 p.m. The cost for the series is $4 and preregistration is a must. Call the extension office at (201) 788-1338.

Checks should be made payable to "Agricultural Advisory Council" and mailed to Elaine Barbour, 4 Gauntt Place, Flemington, New Jersey 08822.

Farmer Boy Ag crates reduce creep crushings because they are narrow at the top and wide at the botton. This design prevents the sow from turning and ensures that she takes extra care in rising and lying down. The full access, adjustable rear bumper gate allows easier entry or exit. The all welded, 1½" square steel tube construction, with its smooth bends, eliminate sharp edges that can cause injury.

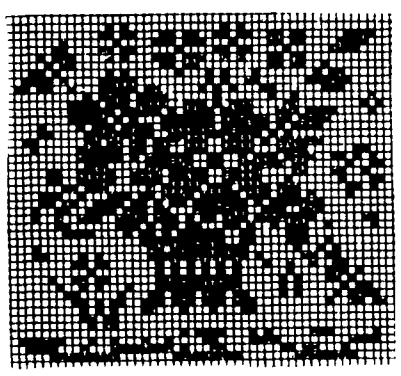
CRAFT CORNER



With relative ease you can create beautiful counted cross-stitch using delicate, extra-narrow satin ribbons instead of thread. Double-faced polyester satin ribbons measuring a mere one-sixteenth inch, are washable, colorfast, will not shrink, and are available in a beautiful spectrum of colors. These qualities make ribbon cross-stitch particularly suited to enhancing store-bought fashions.

Personalize an off-the-rack sweater with your own initials or an attractive floral design. Stitch charts with hundreds of suitable designs can be found in needlework shops and adapted from filet crochet diagrams.

For an original design collect graph paper and colored pencils. Draw carefully the outline of your design. Find the center of the design and locate the center of the graph paper. Starting with the center, begin making "Xs" on the graph paper in the boxes. Use a different color X for every color ribbon you intend to use. After your outlines have been filed with Xs, hold the chart at a 6-foot distance and check for overall appeal and design balance. Make any changes now.

Before beginning your project, make sure that your garment can accommodate the design. To do this count the number of stitches on the graph both horizontally and vertically. Next, count the number of horizontal and vertical knitted stitches and center design. Place a straight pin in the center of the garment, just below the neckline. Begin stitching at this point.

Use one thickness of ribbon and one knitted stitch of the garment. Work cross-stitch with even tension and without a hoop. Be sure to keep the ribbon flat.

Remember when cross-stitching to work all stitches in the same direction by first working one-half stitch in one direction and then working back in the other direction to complete each stitch.

Block the garment by pressing it with a damp cloth and moderately hot iron on the reverse side of the design.

Vicki Benzak (left) of Benzak Meats in Bethlehem proudly poses with the Montgomery County Grand Champion 4-H Market Lamb recently purchased for $5.00 per pound from Jane Landin of Lansdale, a member of the Green Pastures 4-H Sheep Club. Benzak Meats also purchased the Reserve Champion Lamb for $2.75 a pound.

Benzak Meats is top buyer at 4-H Lamb Sale

NORRISTOWN — Benzak meats of Bethlehem could indeed be called the "Home of Champions" being the buyer of the grand and reserve grand champion market lambs at the Montgomery County 4-H Lamb Sale held recently at Perkiomenville Livestock Auction.

Joseph Benzak was the top bidder paying $5 per pound for the grand champion owned by Jane Landin of Lansdale. The reserve champion was raised by Anna Landin, Lansdale, and was purchased by Benzak Meats for $2.75 a pound.

County agent Nancy Kadwill expressed appreciation to Benzak and all the buyers for their support of the 4-H livestock program. Appreciation was also extended to the staff of the Perkiomenville Sales Auction for conducting the sale.

Other 4-H'ers participating in the event were Chris and Greg Muse of Perkasie, Mark Schellenberger of Lansdale, Joshua Landis of Perkiomenville and Craig Kinsky of Lansdale.

Buyers included Benzak Meats of Bethlehem, Hennings Market of Harleysville, John Black of Skippack, Scholl's Trucking of Perkasie and Baum's Meats of Lansdale.

The Green Pastures 4-H Sheep Club invites new members ages 8-19 to join the club to learn more about raising sheep. Members can raise market lambs and breeding sheep as projects. For more information call 277-0574.

Jaguars rival tigers as expert swimmers

WASHINGTON — When it comes to status, the jaguar — the cat, not the car — can't compete with the three other big cats, the lion, tiger, and leopard,. the jaguar's closest relative.

It's image problem lies in the nature of the beast. The world's largest spotted cat leads a very secretive life in thickly forested junbles in inhospitable lands, from Mexico south into Argentina. It is one of the most mysterious of all large cats, and one of the most threatened. No one knows for sure how many are left.

Feared and revered, the jaguar has a reputation as a killer. The instinctive reaction that still prevails among people deep in the interior of Brazil, for example, is to shoot "el tigre" on sight — not get to know him.

Swimming To Survive

During the three years that wildlife biologist Howard Quigley spent there studying the animal, more jaguars were killed in the wild than were captured for research. "It's considered macho," he says.

Quigley's research — the first to focus on a jaguar family — found that jaguars rival, and possibly surpass, tigers in at least one arena: water. They have no fear of piranhas and caimans, are remarkably good swimmers, and can easily cross five-milk aquatic expanses.

In the swampy Pantanal region of southwestern Brazil, they must swim to survive. In the rainy season, more than 70 percent of the nearly 25 million acres of savanna are under water for as much as six months of the year.

"Jaguars have no problem going from one patch of forest to another through water six feet deep to find prey," says Quigley. "They can swim a mile or two in a night."

The jaguars' affinity for water, he explains, is substantiated by where they tend to live. The animals are more numerous in the wetter parts of the Pantanal, while mountain lions and pumas are more prevalent in drier habitats.

But swimming can be fatal, too. He says boaters shot two swimming jaguars and left them to be devoured by piranhas.

Quigley's research is a continuation of the jaguar ecology project begun in 1977 by Dr. George B. Schaller, director of the New York Zoological Society's Animal Research and Conservation Center, and Peter G. Crawshaw, Jr., a Brazilian research biologist.

Because of the extreme difficulties in finding and tracking jaguars, Quigley's year in the Pantanal stretched into three. His study, the basis of his doctoral work at the University of Idaho, was centered on a privately owned 600,000-acre ranch.

Up A Tree

In the steamy heat of Brazil's Mato Grosso, even the plants are inhospitable. "If the bugs don't bite you or sting you, then the plants will stick you," says Quigley whose lip was torn open by a bamboo spine when he was tracking a jaguar on horseback.

There are no common jaguar trails in the Pantanal. Only dogs could successfully sniff out jaguars. It took from five to seven trained dogs to corner one jaguar. When the dogs closed in, the jaguar, an excellent climber, would head up a tree.

"We'd pull the dogs away and shoot the jaguar with a tranquilizer. Then we'd climb the tree ourselves and lower the animal by ropes. It's very impressive having a 200-pound jaguar asleep at your feet. You could feel its power," says Quigley.

Once the animals were fitted with radio collars, another logistics battle began — keeping up with them. "They move much faster than we do, and they don't have to get into a canoe or saddle a horse first," he says. "What we wanted to do was just stay within radio contact with them."

Ultimately Quigley took to the air — flying after the jaguars in light planes. At that, he felt lucky to be able to keep an animal within range for 24 hours at a time.

What he learned of the jaguar's lifestyle came mainly from one family: Mother, her pair of offspring named Dr. Wonderful and Felicia, and a later offspring called Felix.

Jaguars are most active when their prey are active, at dawn and dusk. They feed primarily on cattle, calves, capybara (the world's largest rodent), and peccaries (wild pigs). Hunted for killing ranch cattle, jaguars are increasingly forced to feed on them because the habitats of their other prey are being gobbled up b development. Jaguars also are th only predator powerful enough t take down an adult steer.

Mother apparently taught he young to hunt. In one 12-hou period, she and Felix killed thre peccaries, more than would hav been needed just for food, Quigle says.

Deadline for entering NE Sheep to Shawl Contest nearing

HARRISBURG, Pa. — The Fifth Annual Northeast Regional Sheep to Shawl Contest has been set for Nov 3, 9 a.m. - 11:30 a.m., during the Keystone International Livestock Exposition, Harrisburg.

"The exciting sheep to shawl competition is open to experienced teams throughout the Northeast," according to state Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell. "Twelve teams will compete for a total of $600 in premiums, trophies and ribbons."

The sheep to shawl contest is a team event with five members — one shearer, three spinners and one weaver — per team. Each team shears a sheep, spins the wool into yarn and weaves an 80 x 20-inch shawl within two and one-half hours. Visitors will have an opportunity to bid on the finished shawls through an auction at 12:30 p.m. in the sheep arena.

A three-person panel will judge the contest on the basis of team identification, shearing, weaving, spinning, speed and design of the shawl. One to five bonus points will be awarded for hand-dryed warp.

A traveling trophy, sponsored by Harrisville Design, Harrisville, N.H., a plaque and $150 will be awarded to the grand champion team.

Less emphasis has been placed on speed with the growing expertise in sheep to shawl in the Northeast. However, the national "time to beat" was established in 1981 by the Niddy-Noddies of Lancaster County. Their record time was 63 minutes.

A complete copy of rules and an applications for the Northeast Regional Sheep to Shawl Contest can be obtained by writing to: NE SHEEP TO SHAWL, c/o KILE, Farm Show Building, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110-9408. Entry deadline is Oct. 17, 1984.

The 28th Keystone International Livestock Exposition, which runs Nov. 2-7, features the top beef, sheep, swine and horses in the country. More than 3,416 entries from 23 states competed for $85,000 in premiums in 1983.

The Keystone International is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Livestock Association in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, The Pennsylvania Farm Show Commission and the various breed organizations. Show catalogs can be obtained by writing to the above address.

The Sheep to Shawl Contest has been an exciting competition for visitors and exhibitors alike. Applications for the 1985 Pennsylvania Sheep to Shawl Contest, Jan. 16, 1985, may be obtained by writing to: Sheep to Shawl Contest, Bureau of Markets, PA Department of Agriculture, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110-9408.

Jaguars

only short distances. Males then are forced to disperse, but females are tolerated within their mother's range to live and breed. Dr. Wonderful established a home range some 20 miles away.

Jaguars are solitary animals that come together only during breeding season. Courting jaguars travel and kill together. Quigley estimates that each jaguar needs a range of 12,000 to 24,000 acres.

It would be difficult, he said, for most countries to set aside such extensive areas for conservation. But Brazil has the land, resources, and opportunity.

The jaguar's range is shrinking throughout Central and South America. The animal has been hunted to extinction in several countries. It once lived as far north as the southwestern United States, but no viable breeding populations are known to exist there today. Occasionally a jaguar will stray across the border from Mexico.

Brazilian protection efforts will be too late for Mother and Felix, Quigley notes. They were killed last year by persons unknown.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

It is so easy to form habits and so hard to break them. Good habits help us to get through our days without concentrating on little things. We just naturally do our regular jobs without too much thought. Every morning after breakfast, I feed my goldfish and every night after supper I feed the dog. I usually work in the garden in the evening until it becomes dark.

So, when something else is scheduled, it is hard to change gears and "remember." I've missed two evening appointments because I was picking quarts of cherry tomatoes or picking edible soybeans. Not until the next day did it occur to me that I'd missed a meeting.

One meeting that I didn't miss was a dinner meeting at my church with a group of ladies from the Greek Orthodox church in Lancaster. Even though there are differences in our liturgy, I was surprised at the similarities in our faith. It was an opportunity that few people have to discuss their church's history with others.

One recent Saturday, my husband and I drove to Clinton County to see some corn test plots. We were surprised to see several couples that we knew. The grading and drying machinery is quite huge and modern. I think that I am invited to come along to act as chauffeur because my husband's arthritis bothers him if he drives a long distance. Again, habit dictated that I should pack a lunch, as we've always carried our food with us on trips. But this time he assured me that it wasn't necessary.

To break the monotony of the drive, we stopped in Snyder County at a farm market and bought a loaf of homemade brown bread and a jar of chow-chow to enjoy later.

Lancaster County Farm Women plan convention

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

MOUNT JOY — Karl K. Kettering, a well-known motivational speaker, will be featured at the 67th annual Lancaster County Farm Women Convention to be held on Saturday, Nov. 3 at the Farm and Home Center.

Kettering will address the nearly 500 farm women expected to attend on "Living Life to Its Fullest." A resident of Ephrata, Kettering travels around the country speaking to audiences at conventions, banquets and corporate meetings, bringing the message of enthusiasm and motivation. He is known, in fact, as "Mr. Enthusiasm," and is president of "Progress Through People, Inc.," his own company which specializes in human resources development.

Tickets for the annual event cost $8 and can be ordered through Mrs. Lorraine Wenger, 249 N. Fulton Street, Strasburg, 17579. Deadline is Oct. 22.

During the program the Lancaster County Society of Farm Women will present a check to the Water Street Rescue Mission, representing contributions from all 35 local societies.

Morning devotions and inspiration will be led by the David Brubaker family, and afternoon musical entertainment will be given by Dawn and Rich Winey.

The morning program begins at 10 a.m., and will be preceded by registration and a bazaar. As the farm women arrive they will be greeted by Lancaster County commodity queens who will offer samples of dairy, poultry and honey products.

Nancy Hoke served as a 4-H project leader for stamp collecting, a hobby she became interested in when her daughter took it as a 4-H project. Here she looks at a sample page of her collection.

4-H leader learned by doing

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

Editor's Note: the week of Oct. 7 to 14 has been designated National 4-H Week to recognize the young people and leaders who make 4-H the largest youth organization in the United States. Many adults across the nation volunteer their head, heart, hands, and health as well as their time to help young 4-H'ers "learn by doing."

LEBANON — Nancy Hoke was "drafted" as a 4-H leader by her county agent husband Dennis, but learned on the job and through the process became a concerned, caring leader and a true supporter of the 4-H club program in Lebanon County.

Never a 4-H'er as a child, Nancy recalls that when their oldest son was nine, her husband told her, "They don't have any leaders in this area." She rose to the challenge, organized a community 4-H club through an existing livestock club and began a 17-year career as a 4-H club leader.

Although the Norsolebco Club was initially an agriculture club and offered "collecting" projects, it now runs the gamut of home economics projects as well. The club averages 50 to 55 members annually, and usually offers about 10 different projects.

Just last year Nancy decided to give up the responsibilities of organizational leader, saying, "Last year I thought I was getting stale, and I wasn't coming up with good ideas."

So she found two people who were willing to work together as leaders, and she now returns to being a project leader. Of her successors, Nancy says, "They make a great team."

Asked if it was difficult to find project leaders, Nancy said, "No one ever said directly 'no.' If they didn't want to be a regular leader but wanted to help, that was okay." Eventually, she says, many helpers realized it wasn't so hard and decided to be leaders themselves.

She added, "As organizational leader I was blessed with a lot of good, capable leaders."

Nancy feels she has benefitted from being a 4-H leader, and explains, "it gave me a chance to meet a lot of nice people - parents, children and other 4-H leaders."

She has also had the opportunity to travel through her 4-H involvement. She has been a chaperone for state events and was a participant in the 4-H Leaders Forum held last spring for leaders from around the state. She found that especially helpful because of the chance to share ideas on how the program runs in other counties.

Of course she feels 4-H benefits the members too. "It gives them an opportunity to grow. You can measure the growth. Some have grown so much they have gone beyond me." She also supports the competitive aspect of 4-H, saying, "A 4-H'er competes against what he was before. They can all be number one, but they must meet the standards."

There have been some definite changes over the 17 years that Nancy has been a leader. "Now there are more urban and suburban children. In the first few years most children were from a farm or had some acreage."

Another big change is the number of other activities in which children are involved. "Other than church, 4-H used to be the big activity," Nancy recalls. Now she points out that band, gymnastics, choir, camp, Girl Scouts and other activities all take time. This makes scheduling project meetings very difficult, especially when leaders try, as Nancy does, to show consideration for her members' very full schedules.

There is not as good a percentage of completion of projects, according to Nancy, because children often sign up for too many projects and don't have the time to complete them. "I think the quality of projects completed is just as good as it always was, but we have to get them to be realistic about the amount of time they have to do their projects." Vacation time wasn't a factor earlier, but now cuts heavily into 4-H time.

Parental support has eroded over the years too. Nancy says, "I think 17 years makes a big difference in how many mothers are working. Those parents want their child to succeed, but we have to depend on the parents to get their child to the meetings." If a mother is working, often the child cannot attend a daytime project meeting.

A member of the 4-H Board of Directors in Lebanon County, Nancy says the Board has determined that they are losing 25 percent of their leaders every year. "We get new ones, but we are losing people who have experience under their belts."

Consequently, Nancy's committee designed a survey to find out why leaders quit as well as how they benefitted. As a control, they sent similar questionnaires to leaders with the same number of years' experience who are still leaders. They hope to compare the results and draw some conclusions which will slow the percentage of drop outs.

So far the return on the survey has been 50 percent, something Nancy considers good. Reasons for leaving 4-H vary from having schedules which are too hectic, to health problems to those who were just "tired," and felt they had been in it long enough. Some leaders felt that though they wanted to be project leaders, they found themselves doing other things. Nancy admits that the paperwork has grown tremendously, but as a county agent's wife, she said she understands the necessity for all the records.

Of course, there is a drop-out factor for 4-H'ers as well, and the Board would like to consider ways to counteract that problem. Nancy says, "We lose the middle school age member. That's the critical age, and for some reason, 4-H loses its appeal." Nancy says if they can keep the children involved through those critical junior high school years, then when they are 15 or 16 they remain loyal, involved 4-H'ers despite the pressures of jobs and other activities. "It will take a better mind than mine to figure out how to keep them in," Nancy says.

The 4-H Board is not only actively seeking answers, but has also undertaken a long range plan which covers many other areas. Nancy said the plan is good because it will give the board a chance to measure how well they are doing.

She said the Lebanon County 4-H program enjoys a lot of community support, but adds, "Wh have an image problem. People think of it as just cows and chickens." Nancy said people don't understand the wide range of projects available. A random telephone survey conducted by members of the board confirmed her opinion, showing that most people think 4-H is agriculture, cooking or sewing.

Nancy says whe will readily teach any project for which the club can't find a leader, except for cooking and sewing. Last year she supervised the dog and pet care projects and stamp collecting. She got involved in stamp collecting when her daughter took it as a 4-H project. She said project books and other materials have improved and offer a lot of help to leaders.

The five Hoke children were all active in 4-H, some of them at a "very early age," according to Nancy because she simply took them along when she was leading projects or meetings. "All of them got to go on to some kind of competitive activity," Nancy says. "It opened all kinds of doors." She said her sons learned the strawberry business well enough to earn much of their college money. All five children went to Penn State, where the youngest is still enrolled. Dennis and Nancy met there as undergraduates.

Nancy now works as a library assistant at the Cornwall Elementary School, a job she was offered seven years ago after serving one year there as a teacher's aids. Since reading is her favorite free time activity, the job couldn't be better suited to her tastes. A sociology major in college, Nancy says, "I learned on the job, just as I learned on the job to be a 4-H leader."

Nancy said she refuses to think of anyone as indispensable, and therefore will not remain a 4-H leader forever. Nevertheless, after 17 years she still feels a strong commitment to 4-H work.

It is to recognize leaders like Nancy that 4-H week was established. The salute lasts a week, but the influence of the leaders lasts a lifetime.

Serving as assistant librarian at Cornwall Elementary School, Nancy Hoke has a dream job, because of her love of books. Here she replaces some books on the shelf between visits from school children.

Chester Co. 4-H'ers gear up for National 4-H Week

WEST CHESTER — 4-H members in Chester County are joining the nearly five million young people nationwide in observing National 4-H Week, Oct. 7-13, according to Donna Connell, County Agricultural Agent/4-H Coordinator.

Using the theme, "4-H Building on Experience," members are challenged to see their own, as well as others' experiences and expertise in acquiring practical skills. They also are learning good health habits, developing respect for themselves and others, exploring career and leisure time opportunities, sharing responsibilities for preserving the environment, and developing leadership and citizenship skills.

Connell said that during the special week members of America's largest out-of-school youth education organization will celebrate with activities aimed at promoting individual growth and accomplishment, creativity, social responsibility, and family involvement.

In Chester County, there are over 225 volunteer leaders, working with approximately 1250 4-H members. These volunteers are among the more than 620,000 leaders nationwide, who each contributed about 220 hours of service last year.

4-H, conducted by the cooperative extension service at Penn State University, is open to boys and girls, nine to 19, wherever they live. Programs are conducted in the 3,150 counties of the United States, plus the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam. Since its inception, about 45 million Americans have been involved in 4-H. In addition, some 82 countries around the world have youth programs similar to 4-H.

4-H thrives because of a unique partnership with the public and private sectors who contribute at the local, state, and national level. Not only does this partnership include financial support, but many business men and women volunteer their time and talents to young people, as well, Connell said. She added that support at the local level is received through the Chester County 4-H Development Fund.

At the national level, support is channeled through National 4-H Council, a not-for-profit educational organization that uses private resources to strengthen and expand the 4-H program.

For more information on how you might be involved in 4-H, as a member or volunteer leader, contact Donna Connell, Chester County Extension Service, 235 W Market Street, West Chester, PA 19380, 696-3500.

INDIANA — A warm, humid, mid-September day was the setting for the Fifth Annual Pennsylvania 4-H Dairy Goat Show. At the Indiana County Fairgrounds 70 goats were exhibited to judge David Funk of Norwich, New York.

Funk began the day by carefully choosing the top junior, intermediate, and senior champion fitters and showmen of the day. At the end of the competition Shelly Novak, daughter of Carl and Patsy Novak, R1, Blairsville, stood at the top with both champion overall showing and fitting awards. Dave Duchess, R4 Washington, received both reserve grand champion overall fitting and showing awards.

Judge Funk, a member of the American Dairy Goat Association, has been a breeder for the past 18 years, began the type judging with the French Alpine breed. Bonnie Shields, Indiana County, was selected the champion doe of the breed, while Gwenn Cribbs was awarded the best udder title in the Alpine competition.

Brenda Shirley, Westmoreland County, received the grand champion LaMancha title and Ed Sollers, Huntington County, received the best udder in this breed.

Dave Duchess, Huntington County, was the owner of the best udder of the show at the Fifth Annual Western Pennsylvania 4-H Dairy Goat Show. Pictured with Dave is Dave Funk, judge of the event.

A Bedford County 4-H member was the top award winner in the Nubian competition. Andy Detwiler won both grand champion and best udder titles of day's show.

The Saanen breed was dominated by Shelly Novak, who walked away with the two top awards in the annual show. Besides receiving both grand champion and best udder Saanen awards, she also exhibited the reserve grand champion goat of the breed.

In the Toggenburg competition Dave Duchess stood at the top with the grand champion and best udder of the show.

Ed Sollers was the winner in the recorded grade classes. Sollers exhibited both grand champion and best udder doe in her class.

After all the champions were selected and judge Funk had selected the best udder does in each breed he picked the overall champion doe and the best uddered doe of the show.

Shelly Novak was received the ultimate champion award. Dave Duchess stood alone as the top winner of the udder competition.

Brush up on food coverings

Many people have questions about covering food in a microwave; so here's the low-down on microwave cover ups.

Covering food when you cook it in a microwave will do several things, depending on the type of covering you choose. All coverings hold heat around the food so it cooks a little more evenly. Some coverings also trap steam around the food to steam the food as it cooks. And some covers absorb moisture or grease.

Here is a list of the various coverings you might use in your microwave, and an explanation of what they do. Choose a covering for your food to fit the type of food you are cooking, and how you want it to cook.

A casserole lid: A tightly fitting lid will keep the heat and moisture (steam) around your food so it heats quickly and remains very moist and damp. Use it for steaming vegetables, cooking pot roasts, stews, rice, pasta, and casseroles where food needs to tenderize or absorb moisture as it cooks.

Plastic Wrap: Plastic wrap is used for the same purpose as a casserole lid — to keep the heat and steam around your food. It can be used to cover dishes and serving bowls that have no lids. Use it for the same foods mentioned above, and do not use it unless you want your food to be steamed.

Plastic wrap may melt from the heat of steam or the food it touches. When you use plastic wrap, try to keep it from touching the food by wrapping it over the top of the dish containing the food. It melts easily of it touches the fat on meat because fat gets very hot. Microwaves will not melt the plastic wrap, the heat from the food does this.

If you have trouble with plastic wrap melting, switch to either the new Reynolds Plastic Wrap or Saran Wrap. These two brands of plastic wrap are made of a different type of plastic than other (cheaper) brands, and will not melt as quickly.

Many cookbooks or recipes will tell you to "vent" a corner of the plastic covering. This is to prevent a tightly sealed container from "exploding" from the pressure of steam building up inside it.

Oven Cooking Bags: These would be used like a casserole with a lid, or like plastic wrap: Use when you want to steam food or simmer it so moist heat can tenderize tough food. Be sure you do not seal the opening with a metal twist tie (it causes arcing). Seal the open end with a plastic fastener or cut a strip off the open end of the bag and tie it shut. Leaving the opening loosely closed will "vent" the bag.

Waxed Paper: When you cover food with waxed paper, it holds in some of the heat from the food, so foods cook more evenly than when left uncovered. It lets most of the steam escape from around the food, so food is not steamed. It also cuts down on spatters in the oven. Commercial waxed paper is so thinly waxed that the wax, if any should get on your food, is not noticeable or harmful. (Other types of waxed products, such as milk cartons or waxed product coverings should not be used for cooking.)

Used waxed paper for covering roasts, poultry and other tender meats you are roasting; for covering food you are reheating, and for covering bar cookies. Use it for casseroles you would cook uncovered in your range oven.

Paper Towels or Napkins: As a top covering, these are about the same as waxed paper, but they will also absorb moisture from the food. Use these coverings to reduce spattering in the oven. They may also be used underneath food to absorb grease from foods like bacon or hamburgers.

A good use for paper towels is to use them for trapping steam that makes bread products soggy. For hot sandwiches or hotdogs: warm the meat alone, then put it in the roll or bread and wrap in a paper towel. Then heat briefly again until it is not. This two step techniques keeps the bread from getting overcooked (hard), and prevents sogginess.

Aluminum Foil: Never completely cover food with foil that you are cooking in your microwave. Microwaves can't penetrate foil, so the food would not cook (and you'd probably ruin your oven!). However, you can use foil as a "shield" to protect small areas of food from overcooking. Cover the corners of square baking pans, the ends of drumsticks and wings on poultry, and the edges of roasts. Use shielding when you are defrosting too, if one area starts to thaw too quickly.

When you use foil for shielding, keep the pieces of foil small. Keep the foil in the center of the oven, over one inch away from the walls or door. Do not let foil touch other metal, such as an oven rack or TV dinner tray. And when you turn the power on, look through the window to make sure there is no arcing (sparks) from the foil. If you see arcing, stop the oven immediately and reposition or remove the foil.

Well, that's about it as far as coverings go, but I bet you have one more question: "Should I cover everything I cook in the microwave?" No, but most things cook more evenly if covered with one of the coverings explained above.

Foods that are stirred frequently, such as scrambled eggs, puddings, gravy, etc. do not need to be not be covered. Also, I do not like to cover cakes I bake in the microwave, though many directions say to do so. When I cover cakes, the top cooks more quickly than the bottom and it is difficult to tell when they are done. Foods like roasts, poultry or casseroles that are loosely covered will be slightly moister than when left uncovered. Leave these uncovered for a drier surface.

Fall is the best time to establish a new lawn, according to Penn State extension agronomist Jack Harper. There is less competition from weeds and the grass has two cool seasons, fall and spring, to develop an extensive root system before the hot summer months. Most turfgrass varieties in Pennsylvania grow best in cool weather.

There are several important steps to take to establish good turfgrass. Begin by having the soil tested to determine its lime and fertilizer requirements. Then rough grade the area to remove all debris and large stones. Apply lime and basic fertilizers (phosphorus and potassium) according to the soil test recommendations. If you plan to apply composted organic matter, spread it evenly on the surface at this point.

Incorporate all of the materials added to a depth of 4 to 6 inches with a rotovator. You can establish the final grade and remove small stones by hand or machine raking.

Select high-quality seed of a turfgrass variety suited to your specific climate and site. Divide seed into two equal parts. Using a mechanical seeder or spreader, sow one-half of the seed in one direction and the other half at right angles to the first to assure complete coverage.

After seeding, rake or drag the area lightly to cover the seed. Do not cover the seed deeper than 1/4 inch. roll the area lightly to firm the soil around the seed.

Finally, mulch the area with clean straw or marsh hay. You may leave light mulches on to decompose, but remove heavy mulches as soon as the grass germinates. Water the area during dry spells of 10 days or more.

To help you become an expert in all areas of lawn care, you can send for a copy of Dr. Harper's correspondence course titled, "Lawn Care". to get the course, you send $9.00, including handling, to LAWN CARE, Dept. 5000, University Park, PA 16802. Make check payable to PENN STATE.

Four York Co. 4-H'ers win state awards

UNIVERSITY PARK — Four York County 4-H'ers have received awards in the 1984 4-H National Awards Program and are eligible to attend National 4-H Congress in Chicago on Nov. 25 to 29.

Carroll L. Howes, associate 4-H youth program director at Penn State University, who announced the award selection, said the 4-H'ers were judged on the basis of project work, leadership ability and participation in county and state activities.

The winners were selected from among the more than 145,000 youth who annually take part in the extension service 4-H program.

Hugh Spahr

Hugh Spahr, of Dover, received the state Food Conservation and Safety award. The son of Richard and Darlene Spahr, he is a freshman at Dover Area High School. He has been a 4-H member for seven years.

A member of the Davidsburg 4-H club, he served as secretary and song leader. He also assisted with club activities and events as a teen leader.

Spahr has completed projects in yeast breads and pet care and participated in the 4-H Fair, Demonstration Days, State Days and Regional Nights.

Ann Hutschenreuter, of Airville, received the state Citizenship award. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hutschenreuter, she is a senior at Red Lion Area High School. She has been a 4-H'er for eight years.

A member of the Airville 4-H club, she served as secretary and historian. She also assisted with club activities and events as a teen leader.

Thomas Beck

She completed projects in citizenship and photography and participated in the county council and the 4-H fair. She also participated in State Days and Leadership Congress.

Thomas Beck of Seven Valleys was named Petroleum Power award winner. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Emory Beck, he is a freshman at the Penn State York Campus. He has been a 4-H member for seven years.

A member of the Loganville 4-H club, he served as president and vice president. He also assisted with club activities and events as a teen leader.

Beck has completed projects in tractor, small engines and backpacking and participated in County Council and Achievement Days. He has also taken part in State Days and Club Congress.

Christine Shive

Christine Shive of Seven Valleys received the Gertrude L. Warren Career Scholarship. The daugher of Gordon and Dianna Shive, she is a freshman at the York College of Pennsylvania. She has been in 4-H for nine years.

A member of the Jefferson Community 4-H club, she served as president and secretary. She also assisted with club activities and events as a teen leader. She has completed projects in beef, photography, public speaking, and teen leadership and has been involved in the Spring Fling and livestock judging contests.

Ann Hutschenreuter

Shive also participted in State Days and Leadership Congress.

These York 4-H'ers are among 45 Commonwealth 4-H members selected as state contest winners in various project categories.

Montgomery Co. extension announces microwave class

NORRISTOWN — Do you find that you are only using your microwave to reheat leftovers? Are you uncertain about which containers to use or which foods cook properly in a microwave?

If so, the Penn State extension service has the course for you. A four-week Microwave Cooking School will be held on Wednesday, October 10, 17, 24 and 31. The course is offered from 1 to 3 p.m. or 7 to 9 p.m. Class fee is $20 and includes handouts, recipes and a taste of all food prepared.

Registration is required. For more information, contact the Montgomery County Extension Service at 277-0574.

[illegible] October a Pork Month

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

HARRISBURG — The gala opening of October as Pork Month in Strawberry Square on Monday had all the necessary ingredients.

–The National Pork Queen with a sincere wholesomeness as American as Easter ham.

–Government ag officials with proclamations and words of praise.

–Gourmet chefs whipping up tantalizing aromas from their charcoal grills.

–Pretty young ladies in pigskin fashions.

--Packers displaying their wares.

–And, of course, the main ingredient, plenty of pork – samples for tasting – delicious and nutritious.

The wet opening of October after a bone-dry September moved the event indoors from the Capitol steps. And, perhaps, this was for the best. The food, fashions and fun grabbed hold of Strawberry Square shoppers – the same ones who visit the meat counters of their supermarkets.

The prize for traveling the fartherest (and only a week after a Penn State win out there) went to pert Janeen Chamberlin, National Pork Queen, who came all the way from Gladbrook, Ia.

An Iowa State junior in ag journalism, she journeyed to Pennsylvania with her father, Wayne, who operates a farrow-to-finish operation that markets about 3200 hogs a year.

Her main message was right to the point:

"Eat pork – it's lean, nutritious and a great buy for the consumer."

Four charcoal grill gourmets competed for the Pork Cookout King title, including Henry Angle, Lemasters; David Reichard, Shady Grove; D. David Leabhart, Elizabethtown; and Samuel Gillespie, Chambersburg.

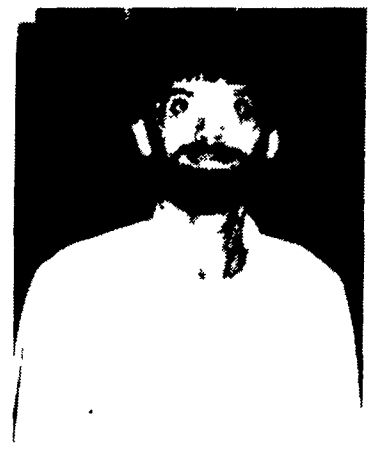
Among state officials were Chet Heim, deputy ag secretary, who read the Governor's Proclamation; Noah Wenger, Senate Ag Committee; and Ted Stuban, House Ag Committee.

And, a trio of pretty PDA employes modeled pigskin fashions.

And off to the side of all of this was an art exhibit that contained a number of ag and rural paintings.

One was a water color of a few stalks and ears of corn. By the size of the stalks and ears, you could tell it was this year's crop – not last year's.

And that painting sorta said it all. That corn will be turned into quite a few pounds of pork to be sold in coming months.



Winning chef in the Pa. Pork Cookout King competition is D. David Leabhart, of Elizabethtown, who featured a Pork Tasty Steaks recipe.

"PORK TASTY STEAKS"

3 boneless center steaks of Boston Butt
Season well with onion salt
Dash lightly with black pepper
Charcoal grill, broil, or *pan fry
Cook approx. 7-9 min. ON EACH SIDE
*Fry in butter or margarine

Department of Agriculture employees model pigskin fashions from I. Mishkin, of Strawberry Square. From the left are Barbara Constanzo, in royal blue shift; Barbara Manning, in striped, wing-sleeve top and skirt; and Sherry Milliken, in pigskin skirt.

National Pork Queen Janeen Chamberlin and her father, Wayne, traveled all the way from Gladbrook, Ia. to help launch Pork Month in Harrisburg.

Curt Stoudt, of Leidy's, of Souderton, hands out sausage samples to eager customers.

A steady stream of "customers" sampled products from a quartet of packers who set up displays in Strawberry Square.

HARRISBURG — An excellent restaurant meal is worth letting people know about, so now is your chance during the Pennsylvania Excellence in Pork Contest.

Pennsylvania residents are being encouraged to nominate their favorite Pennsylvania restaurant which serves Pennsylvania Pork entrees. Each person nominating a restaurant will receive a selection of full-color pork recipe booklets.

Nominations must include the name, address, and phone number of the restaurant, and the Pennsylvania pork entree which you enjoyed. Nominations will not be accepted from employees or family members.

Nominations should be sent to "Excellence In Pork Contest," Pa. Meat Marketing Program, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110-9408. Nominations deadline is November 18.

The Excellence in Pork Contest is held in conjunction with the October celebration of Pennsylvania and National Pork Month. Each restaurant receiving more than 25 nominations will be selected as a finalist. A large plaque will be presented to the winning restaurants during special ceremonies at the 1985 Pennsylvania State Farm Show.

Pennsylvania has 13,000 pork producers who contribute $63.9 million to the economy each year. Because the Commonwealth is a major slaughtering and processing state, Pennsylvania producers, packers and processors supply 36.2 percent of our annual pork needs through nearly two million hogs slaughtered each year.

Pennsylvania's restaurant industry also plays an important role in bringing agricultural bounty to your table. The contest, which coincides with Pennsylvania Restaurant Month, recognizes these establishments for serving light, lean delicious Pennsylvania pork.

The Excellence in Pork Contest is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Meat Marketing Program in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council.

Ribbons and trophies were awarded to the 4-H members who did the best job of fitting and showing a rabbit during the rabbit round-up in Franklin County. From left are: Tim Seibert, Shippensburg; senior champion showmanship; Sam Welty Jr., Chambersburg, junior champion; Dennis Holcomb, judge; Cathy Seibert, Shippensburg, junior reserve champion showmanship; Rhonda Garling, Chambersburg, senior reserve champion showmanship.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — An estimated 60.8 million Americans won't start their day without them

Health-conscious Americans are swallowing vitamins in record numbers in an attempt to ward off everything from colds to cellulite. According to nutritionist Dorothy VanZandt, however, vitamins and their functions "are misunderstood by a majority of their users."

If vitamins are a part of your morning routine, make sure you know how they can and cannot help you. As a vitamin primer, consider these myths and facts:

Myth: Organic or natural vitamins are nutritionally superior to synthetic vitamins.

Fact: Synthetic vitamins, manufactured in the laboratory, are identical to the natural vitamins found in foods. The body cannot tell the difference between the two kinds of vitamins; it gets the same benefits from either source.

Myth: Vitamins give you "pep" and "energy."

Fact: The 13 vitamins the body needs yield no calories and do not provide energy. They are, however, needed for body maintenance. If any vitamin is regularly missing from your diet, a deficiency disease may result.

Myth: The more vitamins the better.

Fact: Taking vitamins in excess of the "Recommended Daily Allowance" is a complete waste, both in money and effect. In fact, excess amounts of some vitamins actually can be harmful. Excess vitamin E, for example, can cause headaches, nausea, muscle weakness, and even low blood sugar. Prolonged, excessive intake of vitamin D can cause constipation and loss of appetite. Excess vitamin usage is advised only when suggested by a doctor.

Myth: You cannot get enough vitamins from conventional foods.

1984 Candy Queen

Nancy Hartz promotes sweet, delicious candy

BY SUZANNE KEENE

LITITZ — People are often surprised but pleased to find 1984 Pennsylvania Candy Queen Nancy Hartz participating in product promotions along with the other commodity queens who represent a variety of agricultural products ranging from milk to mushrooms.

This is only the second year that the candy industry has had a representative among the commodity queens, and people are not as familiar with her as they are with the dairy princesses. However, the general public has been quite receptive and pleasant, Nancy says.

During a number of promotions, Nancy said, people have commented: "Oh, this is nice. This (candy) tops off all the other things we've eaten."

Nancy says she was a little surprised at receiving such a positive reception from the public. At first she expected to hear from at least a few irate mothers complaining about candy's empty calories.

While she hasn't met with any disagreeable folks since she was crowned at a Pennsylvania Manufacturing Confectioner's Association meeting in June, Nancy still sees her job as pointing out that candy can be a nutritional food.

Her goal, she said, "is to bring a better understanding of what candy is and is not."

She hopes to convey the message that candy is not a junk food and contains lots of milk, nuts and dried fruits that provide vitamins and calcium.

"Candy is more nutritional than people think," she stresses. "There is no such thing as an empty calorie. All calories have a purpose."

In addition to its nutritional benefits, candy offers a psychological boost, Nancy continued. "Candy is a pick-me-up," she explained.

While she does not deny that candy does have its share of calories, Nancy says it doesn't have as many as people think.

As secretary to the vice president of the controller at Wilbur Chocolate Factory Co., Nancy sees and smells plenty of chocolate every day. She also likes to sample the commodity, noting that at a recent candy show in Philadelphia, she stuffed herself so full of candy, that she had to take some home to sample later.

Her petite figure is convincing evidence that eating candy doesn't make you fat, but she does point out that an excess of candy, just like an excess of anything, is not good for you.

Nancy said she was a little surprised when she was named candy queen, since at 38 she is older than many of the other commodity queens. But when she was assured that she would not have to appear in a bathing suit at any of the promotional functions, she enthusiastically agreed to bear the crown and banner.

"It is really neat to promote the industry you work for," Nancy says.

Nancy's sons - Brian, 11, and Wade, 9 - are excited about having a queen for a mother. They especially enjoyed devouring the big bag of candy Nancy received when she was crowned, and they don't seem to mind cooking when mom is out promoting candy.

Most of the knowledge Nancy has about the candy industry she has learned during her two and a half years at Wilbur Chocolate, where she has worked in sales and accounting and as a secretary.

In these capacities she has had to learn what's in each of the 50 kinds of chocolate Wilbur produces and how each one is made - knowledge that is helpful to her in answering the public's questions about the candy industry.

Nancy said she is frequently asked if the candy she distributes during her promotions is produced in Pennsylvania. She tells them that the candy is made in Pennsylvania, and that Pennsylvania has the second largest confectionery business in the United States.

People are also interested in dietetic candy, and ask why she isn't handing it out at her promotions. Dietetic candy is for a very limited market, Nancy explained, and while it has less sugar than regular candy, it often contains more calories.

Nancy said she has already been able to participate in more promotions than the previous candy queen and hopes to see the future queens become increasingly active. She and representatives from the candy industry have been busily preparing for Farm Show promotion, where Nancy might be making candy instead of just giving it away.

"If you're actually doing something, people are that much more interested," Nancy said.

When she isn't working at Wilbur Chocolate or promoting candy, Nancy enjoys horseback riding, canoeing, and sewing.

She also enjoys making her own candy, but says that right now, she is too busy being candy queen to make much. For her favorite fudge recipe turn to page B6.

Build snack savvy with nutritious treats

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — It's been called America's favorite pastime, but it's a pastime with a public relations problem worthy of Madison Avenue's sharpest troubleshooters.

The topic is snacking — a much maligned and misunderstood habit that can actually aid weight-watchers, introduce young children to new foods, and add missing nutrients to a day's diet.

"Snacks are a nutritional nightmare if you rely only on vending machines," says University of Maryland Extension home economist Dorothy VanZandt. "But if you opt for between-meal pick-me-ups that are rich in protein, vitamins, or minerals, you're helping out your body."

In short, says VanZandt, good nutrition is not a matter of how frequently you eat, but of what you eat. VanZandt suggests the following snacks:

— Put watermelon, without seeds or rind, into a blender and whip into a pulp. Pour into popsicle molds and freeze.

— Blend one small or medium carrot with 1 cup unsweetened pineapple juice, for a carrot-pineapple drink. Add two or three ice cubes at high speed.

— String fresh or dried fruit on skewers or toothpicks and serve as a fruit kabob. (Dip the cut surfaces of light-colored fresh fruits into pineapple or citrus juice to prevent darkening.)

— Make a parfait of cottage cheese, yogurt, or ice-milk combined with fruit and sprinkled with chopped nuts, wheat germ, or crisp cereal.

— Toast raisin bread and spread with peanut butter, or spread cream cheese on a date-nut roll.

— Combine ½ cup cooked, chopped liver; ¼ cup chopped onion; ½ cup shredded pimento cheese, and 2 tablespoons mayonnaise for a cheese-liver spread.

— Freeze unsweetened applesauce in small paper cups.

— Combine 1 cup cottage cheese with ½ cup chopped nuts, ½ cup chopped dried fruit, and 2 teaspoons lemon juice for a party dip.

— Sprinkle a tomato half with bread crumbs and grated cheddar cheese and broil.

— Wrap melon wedges with thinly sliced ham.

PSU offers antique and collectible course

UNIVERSITY PARK — Fall brings many antique shows, auctions, and flea markets. The most successful buyer at these events seems to be the one who is knowledgeable about antiques.

To help you develop or update your skills before you begin your "fall hunt," you may want to study a course that was developed at Penn State.

The course, which surveys antiques and collectibles, emphasizes those objects of historical and aesthetic value and interest that you can enjoy in your home.

Lesson topics include: What's It Worth?: this lesson discusses appraising, finding, and identifying antiques and collectibles. Silver: discusses how to recognize silver and who to interpret its marks. Ceramic Ware: describes some ceramics that may be available and some signs of wear. Auctions and Flea Markets. Glass: discusses some kinds of glass and signs of wear.

Wood: discusses clues to look for to help you determine the authenticity of a piece, such as water, patina, toolmarks, and many others. Use and Care of Antiques in Daily Living: restoration versus refinishing, care, cleaning, storage, and use of heirloom quilts, ceramic ware, glass, and textiles are just a few of the subjects discussed in this lesson.

Characteristics and Care of Antique Metals: defines and discusses the care of such metals as brass, copper, gold, pewter, silver, and tin. Quality and Design as Standards for Collecting: details quality in materials and workmanship, line and form; is it functional?; has beauty, color, and design appeal; and antiques of the future.

The course ends with 27 pages of pictures of antiques, identified and dated (as possible) by the course author.

To get this 12-lesson course, send $11.75, including handling, to ANTIQUES, Dept. 5000, University Park, PA 16802. Make check payable to PENN STATE.

Vegetables are more inviting when served creatively

MEDIA — Every person needs at least four servings of fruits and vegetables a day, but getting children to eat even one serving of vegetables can be tough.

To help you to get your family to eat more vegetables the Penn State Extension Service has planned a demonstration on Creativity With Vegetables. The meeting, which is open to the public, will be held on Friday, Oct. 12 from 10 a.m. to noon in the Hunt Club Building, located in Rose Tree Park on Providence Road (Rt 252) just north of Media. The cost is $1 and is payable at the door. You will see and taste a variety of vegetables prepared in new and unusual ways.

Some suggestions for making vegetables more appealing are:

- Prepare all vegetables carefully. Brightly colored vegetables may be more appealing than bland-looking ones. Remember that children have more sensitive taste buds than adults and will notice off flavors more quickly. Don't over cook vegetables or keep them hot for too long. Don't serve vegetables that are old, wilted or of poor quality.
- Use sauces to improve the flavor of well-prepared vegetables, but do not try to cover up poor quality. It just won't work. Cheese, mustard or egg sauces, lemon butter of herbs will all add a new and exciting taste to vegetables.
- Try new vegetable recipes. Give vegetables as much consideration as you do the main dish or dessert.
- Children may prefer raw vegetables. Encourage this, particularly as a healthy snack.
- Let children help prepare vegetables. Even very young children enjoy foods they have prepared.
- Have a garden next summer. Encourage children to help plant, care for and harvest vegetables.
- Above all, set a good example. Children will wonder why they have to eat vegetables if the adults in the family aren't eating them.

Select home improvements carefully

MEDIA — Careful — your dream castle may be anothers horror! Before you add that extra story, latticed porch, or second steam room, consider the effect your home improvements will have on the re-sale value of your home.

"Some improvements can increase the value of your home, but some won't help at all," says extension home economist Greta C. Vairo.

Although most home owners consider that improvements on investment, they rarely are. However, with careful planning and some self restraint, you may be able to increase the value enough to cover most of the improvement costs. A new family room can increase the value of your house by 75 to 100 percent of your cost. A fireplace can also return most or all of your investment, althought if not properly used, a fireplace can cost more through inefficient heating. Most home buyers look for convenient, well-designed kitchen and baths or half bathrooms, so these are usually cost wise improvements.

Some improvements depend on the climate or other local conditions — a garage would be a good choice in Pennsylvania but a swimming pool may not be. Maintenance improvements like a new roof or heating unit will maintain the value of your home but won't usually increase its value. However, you will be in big trouble if you neglect maintenance improvements as they are needed.

Extras you might like to have, especially those that are considered luxuries such as built in furniture, skylights, intercom systems, expensive carpeting and fancy lighting may make your dream come true, but not necessarily your buyer's dream.

Do keep a future buyer in mind when you begin to remodel, add improvements, or even freshen up with paint or wallpaper. The things people see when buying houses are very important. A well landscaped garden may add more value to your home than automatic climate control in the wine cellar.

The best plan is to add home improvements for your own comfort and enjoyment instead of counting on them to raise the re-sale value of your home. A $50,000 home with $20,000 worth of improvements is not going to turn into a $70,000 sale if the house is located in a $50,000 neighborhood.

"NATURAL" label doesn't always mean safe

MEDIA — Just because a food is "natural" doesn't mean that it's safe. Herbs are natural but, many herbs used in teas and herbal remedies contain chemicals that are harmful to health. Ingesting even the most common herbal teas can expose you to severe allergic reactions or proven cancer causing ingredients, says home economist Greta C. Vairo.

Chamomile tea can cause severe allergic reactions in some people with allergies to ragweed, asters or chrysanthemums. It has been known to trigger anaphylactic disturbances.

Another common herbal brew, sassafras tea, contains the potent carcinogen known as safrole. Sassafras extracts have been banned as flavoring agents in food and root beer. However, sassafras is still available in some health food stores.

Contributing to the danger of some "natural" herbs and herbal remedies is a common lack of adequate labeling. Often the exact ingredients in an herb mixture is unknown. And most laymen are unable to determine the active ingredients in a plant's chemical makeup.

For your own peace of mind in using herbal remedies check with a pharmacist on the safety before you use them.

Deficiency payments available

URBANA, Il. — Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block has said farmers who participate in the 1985 feed grain, cotton and rice programs and the 1985 wheat program will be eligible for advance deficiency payments.

At the time they sign up, producers may request 50 percent of their projected 1985 deficiency payment and 50 percent of land diversion payments in those programs where land diversion payments are provided. Signup for all programs will be Oct. 15 through March 1.

USDA estimates the wheat deficiency payment rate at $1.08 per bushel and has established the wheat land diversion payment at $2.70 per bushel. The advance deficiency and diversion payments will be half these rates. Details for the feed grain, cotton and rice programs are being provided in separate announcements today.

A producer who accepts an advance payment, but who later does not comply with program provisions, must refund the amount of the advance payment with interest plus liquidated damages.

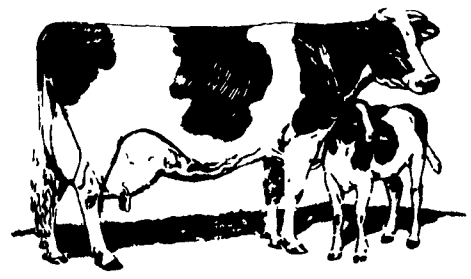
SUBURBAN REALTY FARM DIVISION



SUBURBAN REALTY
FARM DIVISION
(717) 867-5221

Nelson Ebersole, Broker — Suburban Realty, is proud to announce the opening of Suburban Realty's Farm Division. Ebersole has designated a special department designed to specially promote the sale of farm land and farm properties. Suburban Realty has been very successful in selling farms and will offer some special services designed to guarantee maximum exposure, aerial photography, professional brochures and direct mailers to the farm community, public auctions, soil survey information, appraisals, etc.

Nelson Ebersole has always had a special interest in farming and farm people. Prior to entering real estate in 1971, Ebersole was employed by Atlantic Breeders Coop, Lancaster, Pennsylvania, as an AI Technician where he inseminated over 25,000 cows. His route took him to Lebanon, Lancaster, Berks, Dauphin, Schuylkill and Northumberland Counties.

Ebersole exhibited his own personal Jersey Dairy Cattle at the All American Dairy Show in 1970.

Lee Reddinger, Jr., of Schaefferstown, Pennsylvania, will be assisting in the Suburban Realty Farm Division.

NE ag should be more self-sufficient

NEWARK, Del. — East coast consumers rely heavily on farmers in other parts of the country for their food supply. As a result, they pay more for what they eat than most Americans, and they're more vulnerable to unexpected food shortages, according to Delaware extension director. Dr. Richard E. Fowler.It's time, he said, for the region to provide more of its own food.

Speaking before a Sept. 17 gathering of Delaware Valley Broadcasters at the Hotel duPont in Wilmington, Del., Fowler described trends which have led to a decline in the region's food supply system and called on area radio and television broadcasters to help make the public aware of the problem by increasing their coverage of food and agricultural issues. The broadcasters meet annually to seek input on critical issues in the region they serve, which includes Delaware, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Richard E. Fowler

For decades, Fowler said, the Northeast has relied increasingly on food produced in other parts of the United States, and on imports from abroad. Heavy dependence on shipping from California, Texas, Florida and other distant production regions unfortunately has allowed the food system in the Northeast–including the Delaware Valley–to decline and become obsolete.

"Should California growers supply fruits and vegetables to the Delaware Valley while local farmers go out of business?" the extension director asked. "Should people in this part of the country continue to risk disruptions in their food supply due to crop disasters and transportation or work stoppages in other regions?"

According to Fowler, the mid-Atlantic states, in particular, could well become more self-sufficient. Delaware and New Jersey, for example, are still important for broilers, fruits and vegetables. Pennsylvania is the most productive agricultural state in the Northeast, leading the nation in the production of a number of food commodities and ranking near the top in others.

Steps have already been taken to breathe new life into the Mid-Atlantic's food supply system, but Fowler said much more needs to be done. Excellent programs are under way in several states to increase the marketing and promotion of local farm products. And research and extension programs are working to provide new technology to help farmers. But to succeed, he said governments and private citizens must also deal with such knotty issues as farmland ("food land") preservation, soil and water conservation, animal waste management, asistance for beginning farmers, modernization of food processing plants, and adequate transportation for distributing the food.

"This is a long-term problem," Fowler said. "The decline in our food supply system didn't occur overnight, and it won't be reversed quickly."

Montgomery holds no-till meetings

NORRISTOWN — Seventy farmers turned out for the Montgomery County No-Till meetings on Sept. 13. The meetings, put on by the Montgomery County Conservation District, featured no-till equipment, farm tours, slide shows and discussions. The meetings were held to provide farmers with specific information on no-till.

According to Bill Steuteville, No-Till Coordinator for the Montgomery County Conservation District, "There is tremendous interest among area farmers, but not enough information available to them."

Assisting in the meetings were the Montgomery County offices of the USDA Soil Conservation Service (SCS), the Penn State Extension Service, and the USDA Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS). The food and refreshments at the meetings were paid for by the members of the agricultural business community, including DeKalb Pfizer Seeds, Erb & Henry Equipment Inc., Farm Bureau Cooperative, Pioneer Seeds, Reading Bone & Fertilizer, and Robert E. Little Inc.

The meetings were hosted by no-till farmers Sherman Heebner, of Center Point, and Wilson Hoffman, of Niantic. Addressing the meetings were Joe Way, Montgomery County Extension Agent; Harry Schaeffer, Berks County Extension Agent; and Ed Brzostek, District Conservationist of the Soil Conservation Service. Among the topics discussed were planning a no-till crop, fertilizer and herbicide management, and the critical adjustments of a no-till planter. For information on no-till, contact Bill Steuteville at the SCS office, phone number 279-1178.

Paul heads Farm-City Council

CHAMBERSBURG — Dalton Paul, principal of the Franklin County Vocational-Technical School, Chambersburg, will be serving as Chairman of the 1984 Pennsylvania Farm-City Council, according to Franklin County Extension Director, John Z. Shearer.

In this capacity, Paul will be responsible for co-ordinating and giving over-all leadership to the hundreds of Farm-City Week programs which will be conducted throughout Pennsylvania during National Farm-City Week, Nov. 16-22.

Paul has a long history of promoting good rural-urban relations, specifically those related to the National Farm-City Week program. He has served as chairman of the Franklin County Farm-City Week Committee for the past 14 years.

During this period, the Franklin County program has grown tremendously, and has been recognized among the best ones in the state on several occasions. Last year, Franklin County's program placed third among all Pennsylvania counties in the scope and quality of the program. Paul, at that time, received the State Award for outstanding Farm-City Week leadership and participation by an individual. He also served as vice-chairman of the 1983 Pennsylvania Farm/City Council, and he serves as present chairman of the 1984 Franklin County Farm-City Week Committee.

More information on Farm-City Week is available by contacting Paul; or by writing to: Pennsylvania Farm/City Council, P.O.Box C, Shiremanstown, Pennsylvania 17011.

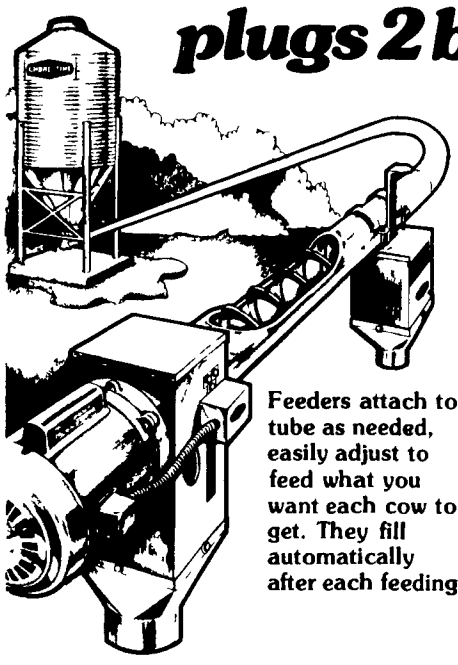
FLEX-AUGER® cow feeding plugs 2 big profit leaks



Feeders attach to tube as needed, easily adjust to feed what you want each cow to get. They fill automatically after each feeding.

Put Chore-Time FLEX-AUGER® Cow Feeding System to work boosting your income

Feeding supplement by hand wastes money two ways: (1.) Some cows get too much, others not enough — wasting feed and hurting production. (2.) It's time and labor spent you'd be money ahead to put into management. Mechanize your feeding with an inexpensive, energy-efficient Chore-Time Cow Feeding System. Feed each cow the right amount, as many times a day (to boost production) as you want by automatic timeclock, or by pulling a lever.

Find out about the Chore-Time system — our 10-year warranty on auger — plus the line of feed bins that outsell all others in America because of their built-in quality and long life.

PIPE INSULATION

Simple to do-it-yourself even on existing pipe installations.

Spectacular results in preventing heat gain or loss, winter or summer.

When your milk lines are protected with ECI insulation you can maintain a nearly constant milk temperature all the way from pipeline milker to bulk tank. Maintains washing solution temperatures for more efficient cleaning. And it can be used on both hot and cold water plumbing. On cold water pipes it retards heat gain and controls dripping from condensation. On hot water lines it drastically reduces heat loss. Efficient and effective from −40 F to +220°F. Lamb workshops begin

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania lamb producers and allied industry leaders can learn the latest in grading, evaluating and marketing strategies by attending one of the three regional lamb grading workshop this fall.

The workshops are set for Greensburg, Westmoreland County, began yesterday, continues today; Trout Run, Lycoming County, Oct. 12-13; and Danville, Montour County, Nov. 9-10. Sponsored by the Penn State University and the Appalachian Regional Commission, the two-day workshops are designed to improve individual proficiency in live lamb and lamb carcass evaluation.

They will also update producers' and allied industry leaders' understanding of the regional standardized lamb grading program now being implemented by major lamb producing state in the northeast and introduce marketing alternatives and discuss marketing influences on lamb prices.

Clair Engle, Penn State Extension Associate Professor of Animal Science, is coordinating the program. Other workshop participants include Bill Henning, Penn State Extension Assistant Professor of Meats; John Zimmerman, director of Livestock Grading and Market Reporting, Bureau of Markets, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture; and Rick Harbaugh, regional manager for the American Sheep Producers' Council.

Commercial workshop participants are Dale Flowers, proprietor and manager of the Muskingum Livestock Yards Zanesville, Ohio; Dan Blackburn, lamb feeder/producer from Stockpoint, Ohio; and Fred Staph, proprietor and manager of the Appalachian Lamb Co., Greencastle, Franklin County.

Bill Henning, Red Meat Specialists, Penn State, explains carcass grade standards to producers at a workshop held at Appalachian Lamb Company, Greencastle.

Swasey named Longwood coordinator

James E. Swasey has been named coordinator of the Longwood Graduate Program in Ornamental Horticulture at the University of Delaware. The program, a cooperative effort of the university's College of Agricultural Sciences and Longwood Gardens, leads to a master's degree in ornamental horticulture, with special emphasis on the management and administration of public gardens.

Among the graduates of the unique two-year program are directors and coordinators of many of the nation's leading public gardens, including the education coordinator of the Los Angeles State and County Arboretum, David O. Lofgren; the director of horticulture of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., James R. Buckler; and the new director of Longwood Gardens, Frederick E. Roberts.

According to Dean Donald F. Crossan of the University of Delaware's College of Agricultural Sciences, Swasey's education and experience make him singularly well qualified to lead the Longwood Program. Swasey holds a B.S. in horticulture from the University of New Hampshire, and an M.S. and Ph.D. in ornamental horticulture from the University of Maryland.

In 1971 Swasey joined the plant science faculty at the University of Maine at Orono, serving also as that university's landscape designer. He went on to chair Maine's department of plant and soil sciences.

Swasey took a sabbatical leave from the University of Maine during the 1978-79 academic year. He spent that year filling in for a faculty member at another university, who was also away on a sabbatical. The faculty member was Dr. Richard Lighty, then the coordinator fo the Longwood Graduate Program at the University of Delaware. Thus, when Lighty resigned this year, Swasey was the only candidate who could claim a year's experience as acting coordinator of the Longwood Program.

Swasey's first official act as Longwood coordinator has been to undertake an evaluation of the program to assess the need for future changes. To that end, he has contacted current and former students, their employers, and others in the field.

The response has been overwhelmingly positive all around. Former students were particularly enthusiastic in their praise of the program's flexibility. Each Longwood Fellow can delve into his or her own subspecialty of horticultural management by choosing appropriate elective subjects and internship experiences at Longwood Gardens.

Besides advising the current crop of Longwood Fellows and charting future directions for the program, Swasey will also teach undergraduate courses in woody and herbaceous landscape plants, as well as parts of a graduate seminar on botanical garden management. In addition, he is negotiating for a new winter term workshop on financial management for nonprofit organizations.

Swasey is married and has three children attending the Kennett Square, Pa., public schools.

Fieldwork moves ahead

HARRISBURG — Despite intermittent light showers and invasion of cooler temperatures, Pennsylvania farmers were provided with five suitable days for fieldwork during the week ending September 30, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service. Average precipitation was .36 inch, or .4 inch below normal. The statewide average temperature was 57 degrees, registering one degree below normal. Farm acitivites included: fall plowing; seeding small grains; making hay; harvesting ensilage, high moisture corn, green chop, potatoes, apples and cauliflower.

Topsoil moisture supplies for the state were rated short by 65 percent of our reporters, adequate by 32 percent and surplus by three percent. Northern region reporters rated soil moisture supplies as 25 percent short, 63 percent adequate and 12 percent surplus. The northern region was the only area still reporting surplus topsoil moisture. Central region reporters rated soil moisture as 91 percent short and nine percent adequate. Southern region reporters rated moisture supplies as 67 percent short and 33 percent adequate.

Across the commonwealth 88 percent of the corn for grain crop was dented or past and 35 percent mature. Last year, 92 percent of the corn was dented and 46 percent was mature. The five-year average for this date was 92 percent dented and 46 percent mature. In the northern region, 63 percent was in the dent stage or past and 11 percent mature. In the central region, 94 percent was dented and 48 percent mature. The southern region reported virtually all corn was dented and 46 percent mature. Corn for grain harvest has started in all regions. The harvest of corn silage statewide totaled 45 percent compared with 60 percent harvested at this time last year. Leaf spot, leaf-blight and corn borer damage were noted by our reporters.

By week's end, the potato harvest reached 73 percent statewide compared to 64 percent harvested last year. Northern reporters indicate 62 percent of the crop harvested. Central reporters indicate 78 percent harvested and southern region reports 90 percent of the potato crop harvested.

Meanwhile, all plowing in the state was reported as 75 percent complete. This compared with last year's level of 66 percent complete and the five-year average of 74 percent complete. The northern, central and southern regions reported fall plowing completion rates of 61, 89 and 71 percent respectively.

The harvest of peaches is winding down while apple harvest is reported to be 43 percent complete. Good yields were reported for lima and snap beans in the southern region. Cauliflower harvesting is progressing in the southern region.

The harvest of third crop alfalfa was 90 percent complete compared with 88 percent last year. Fourth crop alfalfa was 46 percent harvested, compared with 40 percent last year. The quality of hay made during the past week was rated poor by eight percent, fair by 42 percent and good by 50 percent of our reporters. The amoung of feed being obatined from pastures was rated average by one-half of our reporters. The remainder of our crop reporters rated pastures below average.

Chester seeks conservation farmer

WEST CHESTER — The search is on for the Chester County Conservation Farmer of the Year. The Directors of the District seek nominations for this award from wives, husbands, neighbors or from the farmer himself or herself.

The Directors will judge nominees on the basis of implementation of sound conservation measures, or innovative animal waste storage facilities, or successful application of low-cost practices to conserve and protect soil and water resources.

Application blanks are available from the District Office (215-696-5126) 235 West Market St. West Chester, Pa. 19380. Applications for all nominations are due on or before Nov. 1.

Beef feedlot program debuts

FREEPORT, Il. — Furst-McNess Company is putting over 25 years of experience in beef nutrition behind what they consider to be one of the most sophisticated beef feedlot program available to cattle feeders today according to Jim Troncin, vice president of farmline sales.

"The new program includes our new, free Maxi-Beef telecomputerized ration balancing service to help cattlemen cut feed costs per pound of gain to rock bottom," Troncin says. "The program also includes five new premixes."

"Through the computerized service, cattle rations are balanced to enable cattle to achieve a desired daily weight gain. Nutritional levels of rations are balanced based upon nutrient values of grains, silages and other feedstuffs available to the feeder and the proper levels of protein, energy, calcium and phosphorus as determined by cattle nutritionists," explains Dr. Stan Bruegger, vice president of technical services, Furst McNess.

"Weight, stress level, frame size, method of feeding, sex, desired gain per day, medication and present feeding program are factors considered in this new computer program.

"Newly-formulated McNess beef premixes are used in the McNess feedlot program to provide essential vitamins, minerals and proteins that cattle need but don't fully receive from other feedstuffs. There is also a choice of additives available for added production efficiency," Bruegger says.

The new McNess beef premixes are formulated to meet the nutritional needs of cattle in various growth stages. These premixes take into account latest university research findings and most recent cattle feeding standards published by the National Research Council in 1984.

Strict quality control of premix formulations begins with purchases from suppliers who consistently deliver top-quality ingredients. Each load of ingredients is examined in the McNess laboratory for content and quality.

"We make certain that nutrients in McNess premixes can be readily utilized by cattle. This helps keep cattle healthier and gaining weight with a minimum of feed per pound of gain," Bruegger added.

More information on the new McNess Feedlot Beef program can be obtained by contacting Jim Troncin, Furst McNess Company, Freeport, Illinois 61032.

Enter Farm Show theme contest

HARRISBURG — Revolutionary ideas have helped make Pennsylvania Agriculture the state's number one industry. Ideas transformed into new equipment, technology and services are necessary for agriculture to maintain its leading role.

The Pennsylvania Farm Show, which showcases the latest in farm equipment, technology and services, and celebrates its 70th birthday in January 1986, looks to its farmers, patrons and exhibitors as a primary source of new ideas.

To celebrate the 70th anniversary of the grand agricultural affair, the Pennsylvania Farm Show Commission is conducting a "Revolutionary Theme" contest for the historic event.

Any Pennsylvania resident may enter. Contest guidelines specify that the theme contain the words "Pennsylvania Agriculture." Entries are to be submitted to the Farm Show Complex Main Office, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110-9408, no later than March 15, 1985.

Entries will be judged by the Commission. The winner will receive an award and $100 savings bond on Secretary of Agriculture's Night, Monday, Jan. 13, 1986 during the 70th Farm Show festivities. The winner will also be the guest of the Secretary for the evening.

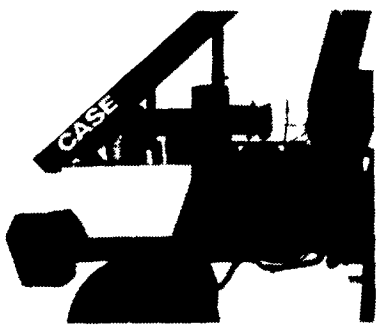
New electro-hydraulically actuated power shift

Case elevating hood greatly simplifies access for routine service. Spring-assisted cylinders hold the hood high. Side panels are easily removed, too. Hood and side panels are weather-resistant, non-metallic.



The true ground speed sensor option -amazing Case wheel slip-monitor
Just touch the "wheel-slip" activator on the touch panel and the actual % of slip appears. You can weight your tractor correctly...select transmission speed more accurately. You'll realize better fuel economy and help extend transmission life with this amazing electronic option.

The Industry Leader!

smooth worm gear drive
Cast iron gears with bronze worm runs in oil — continuous lubrication, for smooth performance Three speeds forward, two working speeds plus a sweep speed, standard, for high speed cleanout so you go back to the field with an empty box No belts to slip — no sheaves Just smooth steady transfer of power from pto to apron chains

non-wrap beaters
Rugged solid bar teeth extend through the drums for extra strength The spiral arrangement of the teeth peels off the load in uniform layers for even delivery PLUS, the large diameter drum virtually eliminates material wrapping Two and three beater combinations are available

960 - 6x16, 3 Beater with Roof,

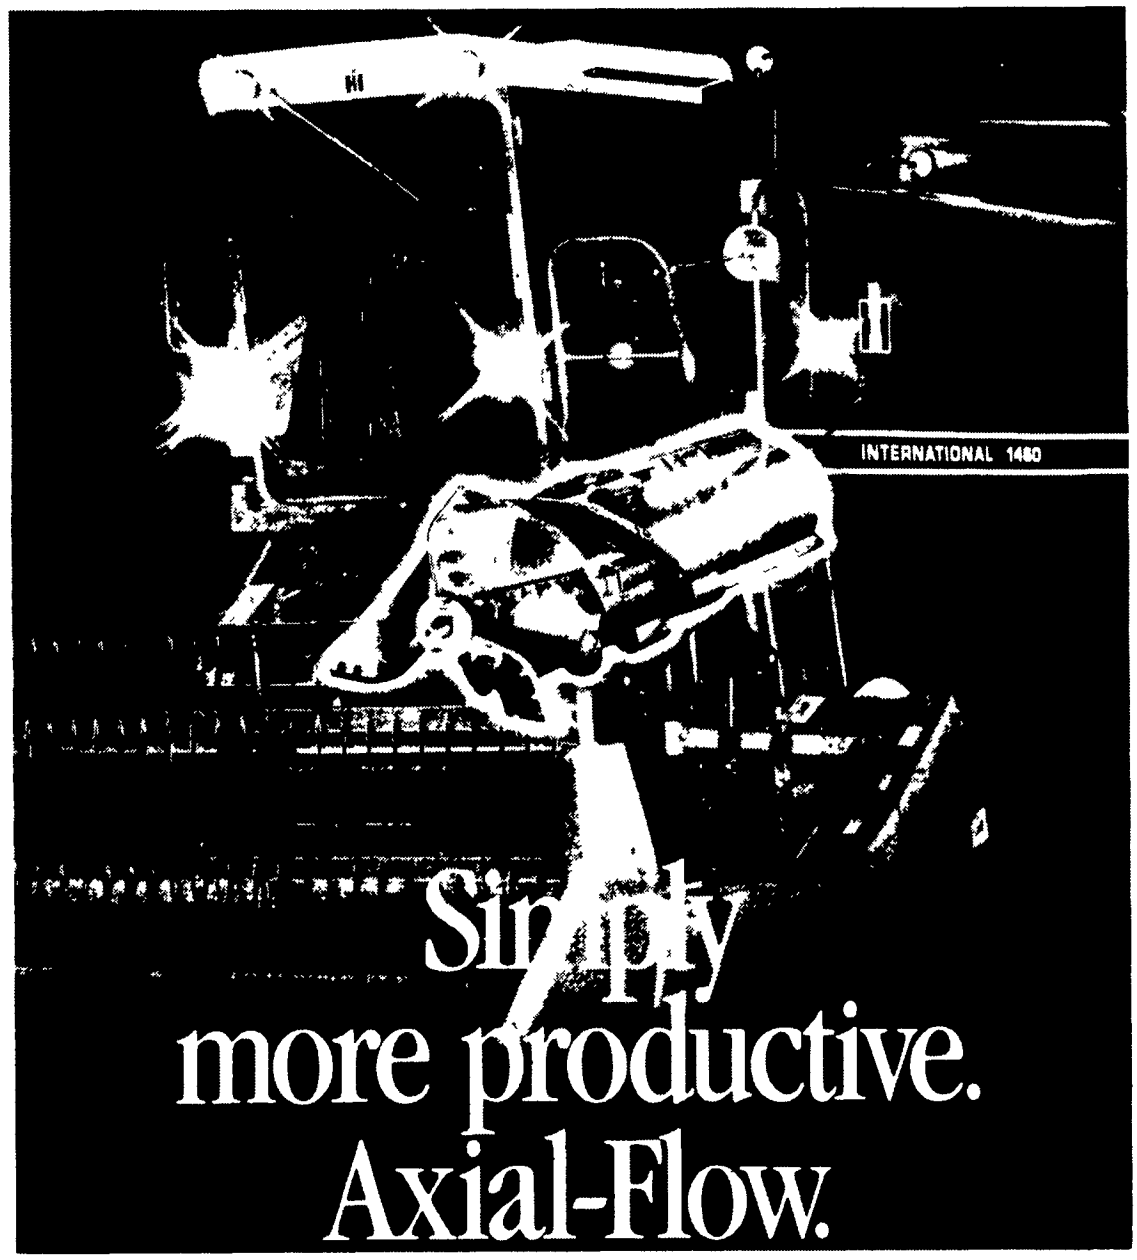
AGRICULTURAL EQUIPMENT

FARMERS REPORT MORE PRODUCTIVITY WITH AN INTERNATIONAL AXIAL-FLOW

Get More Bushels Per Day, More Bushels Per Acre, More Dollars Per Bushel, And More Bushels Per Gallon Of Fuel.



THE FACTS ARE SIMPLE

Year after year more farmers are noticing the impressive results of International Axial-Flow Combines. When your neighbors get increased performance and productivity like outlined below, its no wonder that International Axial-Flow combines have earned the trust and admiration of farmers all over the East.

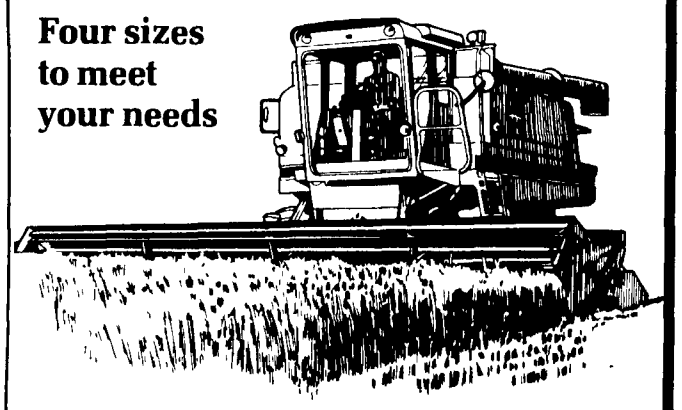
International Axial-Flow Combines

Four sizes to meet your needs



They're the world's most advanced line of combines. Because a rotor replaces the conventional cylinder and troublesome straw walkers. Threshing and separating are more thorough... there are fewer cracked kernels and there is less downtime and fewer repairs.

Four models... 13 to 30 foot platforms
- 1420 – 124 hp diesel engine and 125 bu. grain tank
- 1440—135 hp diesel engine and 145 bu. grain tank
- 1460—170 hp diesel engine and 180 bu. grain tank
- 1480—210 hp diesel engine and 208 bu. grain tank

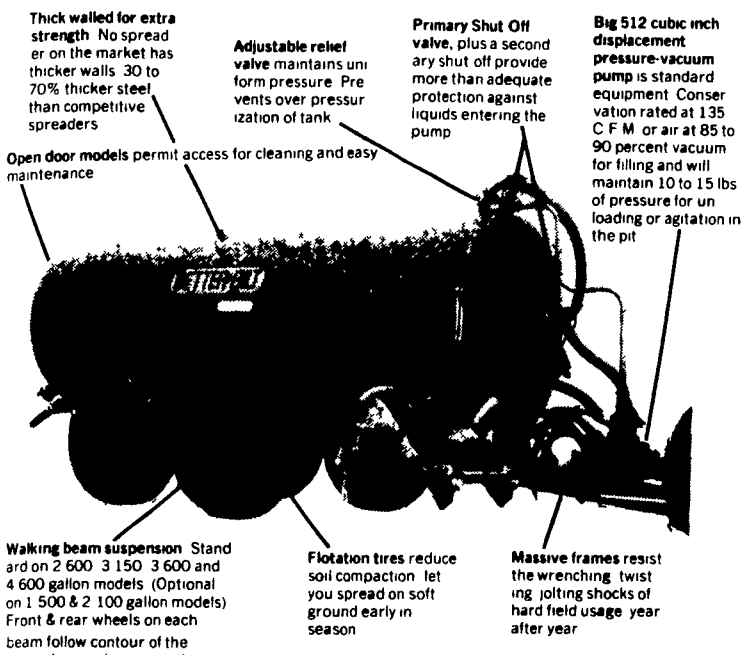
Outstanding Features



Thick walled for extra strength No spreader on the market has thicker walls 30 to 70% thicker steel than competitive spreaders
Adjustable relief valve maintains uniform pressure Prevents over pressurization of tank
Primary Shut Off valve, plus a second ary shut off provide more than adequate protection against liquids entering the pump
Big 512 cubic inch displacement pressure-vacuum pump is standard equipment Conservation rated at 135 C F M or air at 85 to 90 percent vacuum for filling and will maintain 10 to 15 lbs of pressure for unloading or agitation in the pit
Open door models permit access for cleaning and easy maintenance
Walking beam suspension Standard on 2 600 3 150 3 600 and 4 600 gallon models (Optional on 1 500 & 2 100 gallon models) Front & rear wheels on each beam follow contour of the ground provides a smooth level ride
Flotation tires reduce soil compaction let you spread on soft ground early in season
Massive frames resist the wrenching twisting jolting shocks of hard field usage year after year

Sizes - 800 gal. thru 4600 gal.

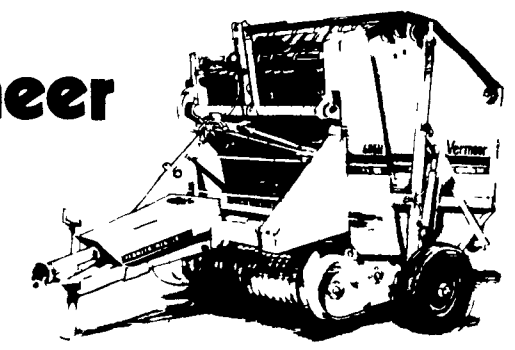
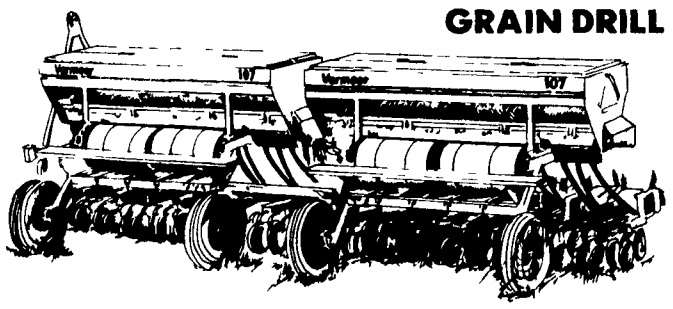
Vermeer 605 BALER



Vermeer can help you spend less time in the field. After corn harvest the Vermeer 605 and 504 Series Balers can turn that corn fodder into a package that is easy to handle and move. Solid and weather-tight the Vermeer round bale keeps its shape better than any other round bale package in the field today. And the best part, it's the most competitively priced baler in the industry.

CALL TODAY AND ASK FOR A DEMONSTRATION AND A PRICE. BALERS AND NO TILL DRILLS FOR RENT ON A LIMITED BASIS.

Vermeer 107 GRAIN DRILL



The Vermeer 107 No-Till Grain Drill gives you that important early start in seeding your fall grains. This rugged built unit gives you adjustable seed settings for any small grain with positive depth control for more even seeding. This unit has staggered double disk openers set at 7" spacings, and can be used for no till and conventional seeding.

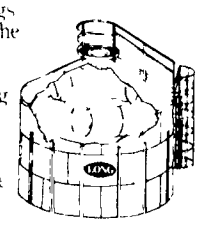
LONG'S CORRUGLASS™ BINS FOR HIGH MOISTURE GRAIN STORAGE

Long incorporates the strength of corrugated steel with the protective coating of glass to produce the most affordable glass lined oxygen limiting storage system for high moisture grain that you can buy. This feed system allows livestock growers to carry more animals on the same number of acres.

OXYGEN LIMITING BREATHER SYSTEM PROTECTS FEED AND CONTROLS THE FERMENTATION PROCESS



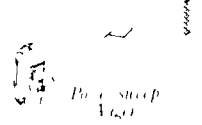
Breather bags suspended in the roof of the bin provide an oxygen limiting environment for the feed. This oxygen limiting feature controls the amount of fermentation that takes place within the bin. Feed stays fresh longer, feed losses are cut – both quality and quantity, and the need for drying equipment and heater fuel is eliminated.

HIGH MOISTURE GRAIN IS MORE DIGESTIBLE, MORE PALATABLE, AND MORE NUTRITIOUS

The controlled fermentation process helps livestock to utilize more of the nutrients available in the feed. The high moisture feed also tastes better, and helps to obtain greater milk production and weight gain at a more economical cost.

BOTTOM UNLOADING SYSTEMS

Bottom unloading systems feature proven dependability and low maintenance cost. Your choice of tapered power driven sweep auger to help prevent bridging and cavities or standard 6" auger unloader with clean out sweep arm.



OTHER FEATURES

Glass fused to steel wall and roof panels for maximum protection.
Corrugated, glass fused to steel wall sheets with exterior stiffeners provide extra strength.
Radius drawn roof with 30.5 degree pitch offers extra strength against snow build up.

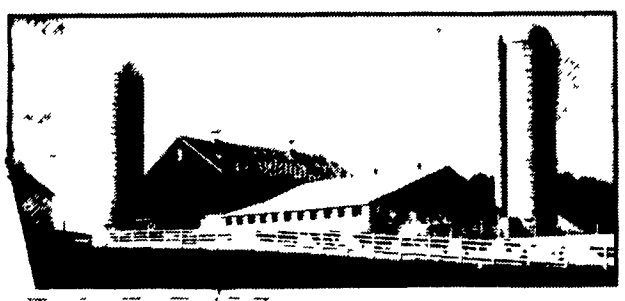
FICKES SILOS...

Dependable-Reliable

Systems That Assure Continuous Service Day After Day

FICKES SILAGEMASTER

Silo construction is not only an engineering science, it is also an art. Fickes Silos exemplify these principles, with their fine stave design and strength, durability and manufacturer's care in building.

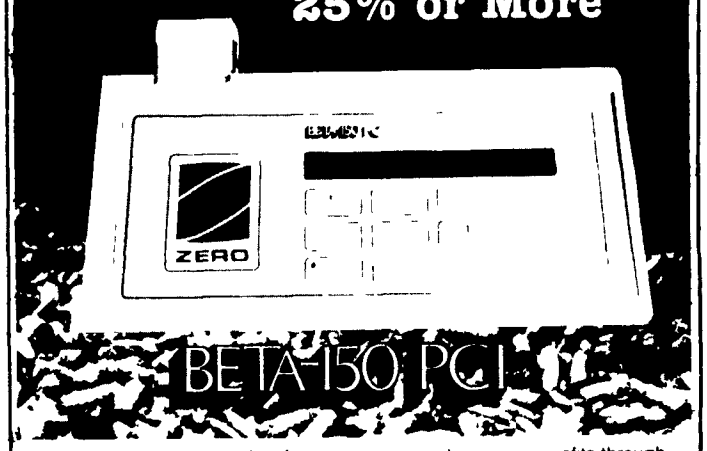


SWING BACK HINGED DOOR

The hardware used in this door's construction is heavy duty steel with a double hinge system to allow the door to swing back against the side of the silo. A double lock system holds the door against the frame for a sure seal.

SILAGEMASTER

Increase Production 25% or More



This new dairy computer identifies your cows with high potential and allows you to feed them accordingly
- has increased herd average production up to 25% —
- has paid for itself in less than a year in feed savings and increased milk & butterfat production
- is easy to program and use
- produces more profits through managing both feed and cows
- interfaces with home computers

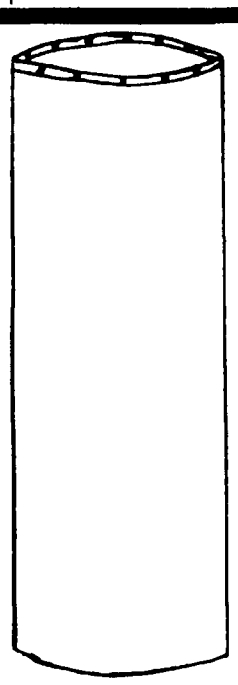
SILO LINERS

1. Reduces runoff
2. Wetter silage packs tighter
3. Tighter packed silage ferments better and makes more lactic acid.
4. Lactic acid increases T.D.N.
5. Is more palatable
6. Reduces shrinkage
7. Does not heat
8. Does not mold
9. Does not spoil in hot weather while feeding
10. More digestible protein
11. Acid does not eat silo walls
13. You don't need an additive
14. Easy installation



Our new liners are made with 3 plys of plastic laminated together with a reinforced top edge and makes a strong light weight plastic tube much STRONGER than regular polyethylene sheeting.

Lefever, Dean win top bids at Lampeter Livestock sale

BY JACK HUBLEY

LAMPETER — Wet weather failed to put a damper on the West Lampeter Fair's Livestock Sale on Sept. 28, as bidders drove prices for both the grand champion and reserve market hogs to the $6 mark.

Topping the sale at $6.25 per pound was John Lefever's 235-pound York-Hampshire cross, purchased by Don Welk of Kunzler and Co., Lancaster. Kunzler also reached for the show's number-two hog, paying $6 for Michelle Dean's reserve champion, a 210-pound York-Hamp-Duroc gilt.

Hog prices averaged $.65 per pound, not counting champions, with Hatfield Packing buying nearly one-half of the 84 hogs sold.

In the steer sale, Michelle Dean's grand champion, a 1,320-pound Angus-Chianina cross, was the top selling beef, going for $1.50 per pound to Ike Thomas, representing Lancaster's Willow Valley Restaurant. This was the third consecutive year that Willow Valley has gone home with Lampeter's top steer.

Doug Ressler's reserve champion FFA steer was the sale's second highest selling beef, going to G.R. Mitchell of Refton, for $1.07 per pound.

Other active steer buyers included the Bank of Lancaster County and Willie the Butcher, of Lancaster.

"We really had a good turn-out of buyers in spite of the weather," said sale manager Merv Keagy. "The fact that our regular buyers were there shows that these kids are producing good quality livestock," he concluded.

NY solicits entries for Holiday Classic Sale

ITHACA, N.Y. — The New York Hereford Association and the New York Polled Hereford Association are asking for nominations for the Holiday Classic Sale Dec. 1 at the Livestock Pavilion at Cornell University.

The sale will feature registered Polled Hereford open and bred heifers born between March 1, 1983 and May 1, 1984. All heifers over 16 months of age must be safe in calf.

Breeders through out the Northeast are encourage to consign to the sale, which will also feature a select group of steer calves.

There is a nomination fee of $15 per head and nominations close Oct. 20. Entry blanks and information may be obtained from Royce Herrala, RD2, Box 46, Geneva, N.Y. 14456 or from Raymond Clark, RD1, Box 269A, Clinton, N.Y. 13323.

ASA names leading bulls for '85

BOZEMAN, MT. — The American Simmental Association has released the names of 99 purebred Simmental bulls that have been designated as Genetic Trait Leaders for 1985. Twenty-six bulls qualified as trait leaders in more than one category.

"The 1985 Trait Leaders emerged from the evaluation of 677,075 progeny records, representing 66,293 management units", said American Simmental Association Executive Vice President Earl B. Peterson. "They represent the top sires in six traits from among a total of 2,570 sires that were evaluated."

All Simmental bulls that meet progeny qualifying standards are listed in the "Sire Selector" each year. Sires are named Trait Leaders if their progeny rank in the top two percent for that trait. Calving Ease: Weaning Weight; Yearling Weight; Carcass Value; Daughter's First Calf Calving Ease; and Daughter's First Weaning Weight are the traits for which leaders are named.

Three Simmental sires earned Trait Leader status in four different categories: Signal, a repeat performer, C & B Western and ABR Sir Arnold G809. Four bulls were named in three traits, including MCR Monarch ID; Bold; Red Eye: and Siegfried, while 19 bulls qualified in two categories.

Previously known as the Sire Summary, the newly-named 1985 Sire Selector contains data on 2,042 bulls, and will be available in November. The Sire Selector is mailed free of charge to all members. Non-members may obtain copies by mailing a check in the amount of $5 per copy to the American Simmental Association, One Simmental Way, Bozeman, MT 59715.

Bidding spirited for Dayton Fair livestock

Scott Coleman sold his Dayton Fair grand champion steer to the Franklin Village Shop 'N Save. The show's top steer weighed 1,131 pounds.

Fifty years from now, I suspect hogs will eat from feeders much like the ones we use today. And I'll bet most producers will still be feeding sows with a cart and a scoop. But over the next half-century, new technology will change a lot of other aspects of hog farming. We'll be able to grow more hogs faster on less feed and hopefully provide the consumer with a better product.

One significant breakthrough is this business of recombinant DNA -- some folks call it genetic engineering. You'll recall that DNA is the material in a cell's nucleus that contains the "genetic blueprint." You have DNA, your hogs have DNA, even the E. coli bugs that cause scours in your farrowing house have DNA. Scientists can now take a tiny piece of DNA (called a gene) from, say, a virus and splice it onto the DNA in a type of bacteria. Is that such a big deal? You bet it is.

The gene that they insert into bacteria could, for example, "tell" the bacteria to make a protein that you need to vaccinate your sows. Scientists could grow these special bacteria on a large scale – and harvest the protein.

What else could you make using recombinant DNA techniques? Growth hormone. Ask Dr. Terry Etherton at Penn State University what growth hormone has to do with raising hogs. He'll tell you that daily growth hormone injections can improve growth rates by 12 to 15 percent, and feed efficiency by 20 percent. That's right, 20 percent. Considering feed costs at $8/cwt and overhead costs of growing hogs at 20 cents/day, growth hormone could save you $11 or $12 a head. But there's more. Etherton comments: "In our last trial, pigs receiving growth hormone had 18 percent less carcass fat, but still showed an improvement in loin-eye marbling."

Unfortunately, there are a few hangups with growth hormone. "Obviously, producers can't be injecting pigs every day," Etherton says. "Soon, we hope to come up with a better delivery system, perhaps an implant. And it's still too expensive. Right now growth hormone costs over $2,500 a gram. I'm hoping they'll have the recombinant technique perfected in the next three years so it becomes practical to use on the farm."

Scientists will soon be using genetic engineering to make other compounds, like amino acids, too. Currently lysine and methionine are the only amino acids cheap enough to use in swine feed. Once the cost of a few others like tryptophan and threonine get into range, we'll be able to take most of the soybean meal out of hog rations and replace it with corn and synthetic amino acids.

Another recent development, already used extensively with cattle, is embryo transfer. Take a high performing sow, superovulate her and breed her to a high performing boar. Wait a couple of days, then flush out the developing embryos and put them into several recipient sows. The donor sow can go on producing a new batch of embryos, while the recipients carry the litters to term and raise the pigs. Ideally, these pigs would provide more genetic potential than anything you've got in your herd.

Artificial insemination is yet another technique that can improve your efficiency, but it hasn't caught on to a great extent in the hog industry. Most producers find it impractical to breed artificially on a large scale. But a lot of folks are using A.I. to breed their best sows. They can then derive replacement gilts and herd boars from these offspring. This allows producers to close their herds, which is a big step in preventing disease transmission.

So biotechnology has given us management tools that are useful now, plus several more down the road. But before you open the door to tomorrow's research, take a hard look at your situation today and ask yourself if you're using the knowledge that already exists.

One simple thing you can do is keep good records. Total herd feed efficiency, breeding record, conception rate, number weaned, weaning weights and post-weaning rate of gain are just a few of the things you ought to be jotting down. Use these records to spot problems and make decisions. If the numbers are too overwhelming for pencil and paper, a computer might help.

Use performance-tested breeding stock. Buy boars on the basis of looks and performance. Know how well the pigs do on your farm, then bring in the blood lines that will do even better.

Make solid efforts at marketing. Look at all the markets in your area. Consider grade and yield programs. And sell your pigs when the time is right, not just when it's convenient.

Keep your pigs healthy and keep them comfortable. Mange,

Sheep Field Day scheduled for Oct. 13

SCHUYLKILL HAVEN — A Sheep Producers Field Day, sponsored by the Southeast Pa. Regional Sheep Council and the Cooperative Extension Service, will be held on October 13, at Penn State's Schuylkill Campus in Schuylkill Haven.

Emphasis will be on the care and management of the breeding flock, and both commercial and purebred flock owners are urged to attend.

Cost of the program is $5 per individual, or $7 per couple or family. The deadline for registration is Oct. 8.

For further information contact the Schuylkill County Extension Service, 717-385-3431.

overcrowding, heat and cold stress can all cost you a lot of money. They're also factors you can at least partially control.

In short, tomorrow's technology offers a level of performance that our hog industry has never seen But it will be useless without good management and attention to detail.

'Sweet Surprise'

In her first year of sheep competition, Lynn Smith of New Alexandria went all the way to the top when her Suffolk lamb named Chocolate was named grand champion market lamb at the Westmoreland County Fair. Lynn is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Smith.

40 years of proof

Since 1940, Gehl has been building field choppers and forage harvesters with one thought in mind ...performance. And, year after year, thousands of satisfied owners prove that we know how to use that specialized experience to build better machines. Today, Gehl concentrates those 40 years of chopping know-how into three fuel-efficient, high-capacity forage harvesters:

Capacity King 1250. The largest capacity pull-type harvester on the market. Gehl's exclusive 24" spinner delivery system keeps forage moving with no cross augers to plug. The giant, 9-knife, 25½" cylinder gives a quality cut. And the new cutterbar adjustment is the easiest anywhere. In-head hydraulic knife sharpener and electric controls are standard too.

New mid-range 1000 gives you the high capacity you'd expect from the big 21" cylinder and fast spinner delivery system. Like the 1250, standard features include the in-head hydraulic knife sharpener, adjustable axles, one-way shear bolt protection and attachment down-stop.

Fuel saver 750 tackles just about any chopping job. Uses less horsepower per ton chopped than many bigger harvesters. Uses less fuel. The 8-knife cutterhead is set into the blower compartment for smooth, continuous material flow. Add Gehl's patented in-head hydraulic knife sharpener for even more cutting efficiency.

Prove to yourself that there's no substitute for Gehl's 40 years of forage harvester experience. See your Gehl dealer soon.

LANCASTER — Ray S. Lehr has been appointed Vice President and General Manager, Feed Marketing Division, of Pennfield Corporation. Lehr is responsible for directing the marketing and sales of the company's poultry, dairy, and hog feed product lines.

He joined the company in January, 1982 as Marketing Manager. Prior to Pennfield, Lehr had been with Central Soya in Fort Wayne, Indiana for 18 years where he held numerous managerial positions. He is a director of the Pennsylvania Livestock Association, and an associate director of the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council. He is a native of York and now resides in Millersville.

Glenn U. Smith has been named Vice President and General Manager of Pennfield Farms Egg Division, Ephrata. Smith joined Pennfield in 1976 in the Feed Marketing Division and was later promoted to Sales Manager for the Egg Division.

In 1981, he became Division Manager for Pennfield Farms. He is a member of the Pennsylvania Egg Marketing Association and the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation Egg Council. He also serves on the Pennsylvania Egg Exhange. Prior to joining Pennfield, Smith was associated with Indian River Poultry Farms. He is a resident of Leola.

General economy having big effect on ag

Farm Credit News

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Representatives of the nation's Farm Credit System reported here on a forum held last week where 85 agricultural leaders discussed solutions to financial problems being experienced by farmers.

"We held the forum to gather input from a cross-section of agricultural leaders and from government representatives on the current credit situation in agriculture," W.M. Harding, chairman of the System's public information committee, said. "We found, however, that the primary focus of the participants was on the general economy's impact on agriculture."

According to Harding, the agricultural leaders focused not on how lenders are handling credit for farmers in these stressful conditions but rather centered around four general points:

1. Agricultural financial problems are not evenly distributed across the country but continue to grow. It was noted that 84 percent of U.S. farm debt, currently at $216 billion, is held by one-third of the producers.

2. The agricultural situation is the result of economic conditions outside of agriculture and will be resolved only when general U.S. and world economic problems are addressed.

3. U.S. agriculture does not have adequate domestic and international markets to accommodate its productive capacity.

4. The short-term financial problems of individual farmers must be addressed at the local level and on a case-by-case basis.

Harding said the participants also indicated the federal deficit is the major problem to be overcome to lower interest rates.

"Agricultural lenders cannot reduce interest rates when they must obtain their loan funds at market rates which are kept high because of the deficit," he said.

Delmar K. Banner, president of the Farm Credit Council, said discussion at the forum favored the Administration's four-point proposal to restructure farm debt.

Banner said, "While we have not yet seen the regulations to accompany the President's directive to the Farmers Home Administration, I'm confident the Farm Credit banks and associations will do everything possible to cooperate with FmHA under the new program."

According to Banner, Farm Credit policy is to work closely with individual borrowers and to continue financing troubled farmers who have a reasonable chance of survival.

"Foreclosure is the absolute last resort and comes only after a vote of the farmer directors of the association," he said. "Farmers need all the help they can get today, and we welcome efforts by Congress and the Administration to help producers survive."

Harding is president of the Central Bank for Cooperatives, Denver, Colorado.

May gets W· Central post

UNIONTOWN — James E. May has been selected by the Boards of Directors of the West Central Production Credit Association and the West Central Federal Land Bank Association to assume the position of General Manager.

These respective Associations are a part of the nationwide Cooperative Farm Credit System. The West Central region includes 12 counties in Central and Southwestern Pennsylvania and also 4 counties in West Virginia. West Central Production Credit Association currently provides short and intermediate-term credit to its 1,958 customers throughout this area, with West Central Federal Land Bank providing long-term financing to 1,897 members and rural housing participants.

May began his Farm Credit career with West Central in 1976 as an Assistant Manager in the Curryville Branch Office. Since then, he has held various positions of increasing responsibility; most recently as Associate Manager-Operations being responsible for credit and operations in the 6 county territory served by the Curryville and Centre Hall Branch Offices.

May was raised on a 160 acre dairy farm operation in Erie County, and then completed a Bachelor of Science Degree from Penn State in 1975, with a major in Agricultural Business Management.

Deere announces ROP program

MOLINE, Il. — John Deere has announced a two-phase effort to encourage more widespread use of rollover protective structures on the company's agricultural tractors to enhance operator safety.

During Phase I, beginning Nov. 1, all tractors will be shipped from the factory with a rollover protective structure and seat belt, or the company's Sound-Gard Body which utilizes a four-post rollover protective structure as its frame.

All current agricultural tractors, from the 14.5 PTO h.p. model 650 through the 120 PTO h.p. model 4250, will be included in the new program. Larger John Deere row-crop tractors and all four-wheel drive tractors have been equipped with rollover protective structures as standard equipment for more than a decade and will continue to be so equipped.

Heretofore, John Deere customers have been given the option of ordering their tractors without rollover protection at a price reduced by the cost of the structure. After Nov. 1, this option will no longer be available.

Phase II of the program, also beginning Nov. 1, will be a special promotional campaign to encourage field installation of rollover protective structures on all John Deere tractors for which they have been designed. The protective structures have been designed for all tractors manufactured since 1960.

"While rollover protective structures do not remove the conditions which may cause a tractor to overturn, experience has proven they are effective in reducing the seriousness of injury from overturns, especially when used with a seal belt. Therefore, we are announcing this new two-phase effort to increase the use of rollover protective structures as part of our continuing endeavor to promote customer safety," said Boyd C. Bartlett, Executive Vice President, Operations, Deere & Company.

John Deere has long been an innovator in encouraging farm machinery safety. In 1966, the company pioneered the first North American agricultural tractor two-post rollover protective structure. The company named the structure Roll-Gard. John Deere initially made Roll-Gard available as optional equipment, recognizing that it could not be used in some operating environments, or with certain mounted implements. To encourage the use of Roll-Gard by customers, the company conducted an extensive promotional campaign at the time of its introduction and, to promote industry acceptance, offered a royalty-free license under its rollover protective structure patents to all other tractor manufacturers.

Since the introduction of the structures in 1966, implement compatibility has improved, and the structures have been incorporated into tractor cabs, including the John Deere Sound-Gard Body, resulting in an increased level of customer acceptance. As this acceptance increased, the company incorporated rollover protective structures as a standard item on all of its agricultural tractors deductible at the option of the purchaser. This is the option which will be unavailable after Nov. under the newlly announce program.

Groff/Jacques Harvest Days

ABC Groff, Inc. and Jacques Seed Co. held Harvest Days field demonstration in no-till and conventional corn plots last week along Rt. 501 north of Lititz.

In addition to corn yield comparisons, Deere and New Holland forage harvesters were demonstrated.

In foreground, corn is examined, from the left, by Jim Bowersox, sales manager, Chemgro; Ron Frohm, district representative, Jacques; and Mark Eshleman, Chemgro.

In background, group discusses and examines New Holland chopper.

Dairy cleaners can cause phosphate pollution

LANCASTER — It is hard to quantify, difficult to track down and a challenge to control. It is also the subject of much debate in both urban and rural circles, and could spawn regulations which would change the way farmers operate.

The issue is non-point source pollution — pollution which cannot be traced to a specific source. This type of pollution can cause major water quality problems, and agriculture is receiving much of the blame.

Eroded soil, plant nutrients and pollutants from other farm sources contribute to the problem. According to experts, the effects on water quality can be varied. But increasing attention to the problem is producing results.

Nutrients Tough Problems

Some of the most serious problems are caused by excess plant nutrients, such as phosphates and various forms of nitrogen. Phosphates have been singled out for their effect on aquatic plants.

Excessive levels of phosphate can cause a condition known as algae bloom. Rapid algae growth affects the appearance of lakes as well as causing water odor and taste problems. Fish kills can result in frozen lakes as decaying algae use of sub-surface oxygen.

Compounding the problem is the fact that phosphates get into the water system from several different sources, including fertilizer runoff and dairy and farm detergents.

Nitrogen can also be a problem, particularly in the nitrate form, where it can contaminate wells and other sources of drinking water.

Soil ifself is another major contributor to the problem. Runoff from poorly protected fields leads to the gradual silting-in of streams and lakes. And the farmer is losing productive topsoil in the bargain.

Dealing With the Problem

New farm technology is already making inroads against the non-point source pollution problem, but the pace will have to pick up.

"Tillage systems have a significant effect on soil and nutrient losses," says John Laflen, soil and water specialist with the USDA in Ames, Iowa.

"Conservation tillage will reduce soil loss, and also the loss of nutrients that adhere to soil particles," he explains. "The net effect is a great reduction in total nitrogen and phosphorous loss from farm fields."

Agricultural companies are also beginning to find ways to lower phosphates in their products. Klenzade Division of Economics Laboratory, a maker of sanitation products for dairy farm use, recently lowered phosphate levels in most of their dairy cleaners in response to this problem.

"We have replaced phosphates with chelating agents which provide all the claning benefits of phosphate without the polluting effects," explains Bill Schmidt, director of technical affairs for Klenzade.

Schmidt explained that concern for future regulation of farm discharges prompted research which led to the low phosphate cleaners.

"As a result, we have come up with agents that not only substitute for phosphate, but do phosphate's job more efficiently and economically," he adds.

Equipment and herbicide companies are also gearing their efforts toward products which lend themselves to reduced tillage or no-tillage applications.

While trends are headed in the right direction, non-point source pollution is an issue likely to receive continued attention. Hopefully, farmers can take action before legislation necessitates it.

Phosphates in runoff water can cause the rapid reproduction of algae, known as algae bloom, in affected lakes.

Banvel and then beans

CHICAGO, Il. — Farmers with perennial broadleaf problems can now rotate to soybeans after a fall application of Banvel herbicide.

According to Wayne Olson, a Velsicol Chemical Corporation Product Development Field Scientist, a new supplemental label granted this year by the Environmental Protection Agency creates some new options for farmers who need to control tough broadleaf weeds such as bindweed, Jerusalem artichoke and Canada thistle.

Farmers can apply Banvel for perennial control to fallow ground or after harvesting but prior to killing frost. The new EPA approval adds soybeans to the rotation list. Other rotational crops previously approved include corn, sorghum and wheat.

Olson says farmers should determine how severe weed infestations are before making a decision on fall herbicide applications and crop rotation.

"If you have a very severe perennial broadleaf infestation, you should apply two quarts of Banvel in the fall and plant corn in the spring. Follow up with a Banvel overlay treatment when corn is from spike to five inches to control perennial seedlings and annuals. If your weed problem isn't severe, you can use Banvel this fall and rotate to soybeans," he says.

While the label change is good for farmers who need to control broadleaf weeds and plan to rotate to soybeans, Olson says it is especially important to farmers who apply Banvel with the intent to plant corn, but find it necessary to change their plans in the spring.

For perennial broadleaf weed control in the fall, apply two quarts of Banvel herbicide per acre before the first killing frost to actively growing weeds. Farmers should avoid disturbing treated areas for at least seven days so the herbicide will translocate into the weed root systems for complete kill.

Brandt heads Farm Institute

READING — The Farm and Land Institute of the National Association of Realtors has installed Richard E. Brandt as President of its Pennsylvania Chapter at the Pennsylvania Association of Realtors 64th Annual Convention.

Also installed were Robert L. McAloose, Tamaqua, as Vice President and Tressie Caton, Wyomissing Hills, as Secretary/Treasurer.

The Farm and Land Institute is an international organization that offers further education to Realtors in agricultural and land development. It has promoted and recommended national legislation to improve agriculture that supports the country's farmers and land owners. Institute recommendations have already been adopted by the present administration in its long range goals.

Brandt, a farm and land Broker, serves a twelve county area. Rich Brandt Farm Real Estate covers consulting, financing, estate planning, appraising and every area concerning the farmer.

Richard E. Brandt

McAloose, a farm and land Broker, is an auctioneer and an instructor at special agricultural seminars.

Caton is both sales associate and office manager of Rich Brandt Farm Real Estate. She is a Texan transplanted in Pennsylvania.

Cornell open house set

ITHACA, N.Y. — Young people interested in admission to three of the State colleges at Cornell University are encouraged to attend one of the two special events planned for this fall — Open House and Transfer Day.

Open House is an opportunity for high school juniors and seniors, and their parents, to visit the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, the College of Human Ecology, and the School of Industrial and Labor Relations, all at Cornell. Slated for Saturday, Nov. 10, this annual event is sponsored by the alumni associations of the three state-affiliated units.

Visitors to the Cornell campus during Open House will be given an overview of the University and the academic programs in the three colleges. High school students and their parents also will meet and have lunch with current Cornell students, faculty, and staff.

On Wednesday, Nov. 7, two-year college students are invited to learn more about continuing their education at Cornell by attending Transfer Day. The College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, College of Human Ecology, and the School of Industrial and Labor Relations are featured in this event, too.

Westfalia markets a full line of milking equipment, stalls, feed delivering systems, bulk tanks and chemicals for the modern dairy farm.

Pick bean variety just like corn

DE KALB, Il. — Selection of soybean varieties can be carried out much the same way as for corn hydrids. Several agronomic and economic factors must be considered prior to selection. As with corn, yield is the primary trait most desired, since it plays an important role in income determination and ultimate farming prosperity, explains Larry Martin, regional agronomist for De Kalb - Pfizer Genetics.

Other than yield, disease resistance, particularly to Phytophthora root rot should be a primary soybean selection consideration. Phytophthora incidence increased dramatically in 1983 and 1984 because of the wet springs. Phytophthora requires moist soil to infect plants. Many varieties now carry varied levels of resistance or tolerance to Phytophthora, but selection is complicated because there are many races of the disease organism.

Soybean cyst nematode incidence has also increased through a major part of the soybean belt. If soybean cyst nematode is a problem on your farm, resistant varieties, if available for your maturity, should be considered. Otherwise, it is necessary to develop a crop rotation so that non-host crops are grown for at least three years before growing a susceptible variety.

Apdatability to solid seeding should be considered. Usually, varieties with thin to medium bush profiles are considered more adaptable but individual bushy varieties (like CX380) may also do well.

Soybeans that have a tendency to shatter at or before harvest should be avoided on light, droughty type soils. Shattering tends to increase on these soil types when drought stress occurs.

Maturity should also be a consideration. Research data through the years have indicated that the fullest season variety for an area tends to be the highest yielding. However, this may not fit your program if you prefer to have all soybeans harvested ahead of corn.

Large soybean growers should plant a range of maturities to spread harvest and to reduce standability and shattering losses.

During the growing season, company variety plots (such as the Dekalb-Pfizer Genetics Field Analysis Comparison Trial--FACT) and university trials are excellent for evaluation a number of varieties under the same growing conditions.

Above all, seed quality should be at the top of your selection process. Seed should be high germinating, clean, disease free, and visually pleasant to provide you with the confidence you demand from a seed product.

Case dealers get computers

RACINE, Wisc. — J I Case dealers throughout North America have begun to invest in the newest state-of-the-art computer system, designed to increase productivity and strengthen management control of the business enterprise.

Computer Profit Aids, CPA/36, allows dealers to focus on key areas of their business operations. The CPA/36 system strengthens the dealer's ability to supply customers with inventory when they need it. All dealers using the system have full on-line processing capabilities, in addition to a direct communications link with Case computers in Racine and Case parts depots across North America.

"We now have a system in which we have a high level of confidence," according to Ronald R. Scholl, general sales manager for Case Construction Equipment. "There's plenty of data to verify that CPA/36 is helping to save time, increase productivity and enhance management efforts.

The CPA/36 is especially designed to help Case dealers focus on key areas of dealer operations, including:

- wholegoods,
- marketing,
- parts inventory,
- point-of-sale invoicing,
- receivables,
- payables,
- general ledger and
- payroll.

No-till award nominations due

SAN FRANCISCO — Nominations are now being accepted for two awards recognizing outstanding contributions to conservation tillage. The deadline for nominations is Dec. 1.

The awards fall under the auspices of the Conservation Tillage Information Center (CTIC) and are presented annually at the CTIC annual meeting. The Hall of Fame program is jointly sponsored by Agrichemcial Age and Chevron Chemical Company.

The awards fall under two catagories: conservation tillage and no-tillage. Nominations for either catagory should include the following information:

—Award catagory – either conservation tillage or no-tillage (enter only one catagory);

—Nominee's business or profession (title and brief background);

—Nominee's major contributions to conservation or no-tillage farming;

—Resume of nominee's personal background (birthplace, education, career achievements, related activities).

Judging will be based solely on the information submitted, so nominations should be specific and complete. Additional information is encouraged.

If entry is submitted by a person other than the nominee, the other person is requested to state name, title, address and phone number. The decision of the judges is final, and all entries must be postmarked no later than Dec. 1.

Last year, awards went to Soil Conservation Chief Peter Myers and National Association of Conservation Districts (NACD) President Milton E. "Bud" Mekelburg.

The sponsors, Agrichemical Age and Chevron Chemical Company have long been leaders in conservation tillage. Chevron was an early supporter of the CTIC and continues to encourage no-tillage farming practices.

CTIC, founded January, 1983, is a clearinghouse for information on all facets of conservation tillage. It was established as a special project of NACD and is administered in cooperation with agricultural industries, government agencies, private donations, organizations and farmers.

Nominations should be sent to Agrichemical Age, 83 Stevenson St., San Francisco, CA 94105.

End dump trailers introduced

FRESNO, Calif. — American Carrier Equipment Inc., of Fresno, Calif., has introduced multi-purpose End Dump Trailers to the company's line of agricultural Shuttlvan hauling equipment.

The end dump offers high volume hauling for a wide variety of bulk commodities; the lightweight, heavy-duty design allows for optimum capacities and maximum legal payloads.

American Carrier Equipment is a recognized leader in waste hauling equipment and the new End Dump Trailer is part of the firm's major expansion into quality, heavy hauling equipment for a full range of industries including agriculture and construction.

Complete information is available from the manufacturer. American Carrier Equipment, P.O. Box 2615, Fresno, CA 93745; Toll-Free Outside California: 800-344-2174.

Three-bar and 5-bar spike drags mount on the rear frame of Brillion's Soil Groomer, Soil Blender (chemical incorporator), Field Cultivator and Soil Builder coulter-chisel. They may be adapted to other makes and models by using different mounting hardware than that supplied.

Depending on soil and residue conditions, you can adjust the angle of the spike teeth to five different positions, from almost flat to 55°. A clevis pin holds each spike tooth bar securely in the five individual positions. A sturdy handle is used to move the spike drag to the various positions, from aggressive soil action to just breaking up surface clods.

The Spike Drag Kit has 3/4"x12" spikes. Mounting support arms are 2"x4" tubes. Tooth mounting bars are 2"x2". Tow chains are adjustable.

Give 'Em A Chance

Your young heifers of today — or tomorrow — have the opportunity of becoming your good herd of the future if you give them the opportunity! You've probably heard me say this before, but I'll repeat it again, "genetically, the best animal in your herd should be one of your present calves, and that calf deserves the same very best care and attention that you give to your very best cow!"

Even though a heifer is not producing milk and not earning you a monthly milk check, she still deserves proper care and attention. If you've been using good, plus-proven bulls, she has the bred-in potential to produce. Don't put a lid on her ability to produce and to stay in the herd by neglecting her as a heifer.

Your aim ought to be to raise healthy, heifers that are growthy enough to breed at an early age so they will be ready to calve and start earning you can income by 24 months of age. You should also be striving to breed them to a good, plus-proven bull. Granted, it will be costlier to raise heifers in this fashion, but they'll still be more profitable.

If you are short on facilities, feed and labor, then it would be wise to raise only your best heifers, and only as many as you can care for properly. This is better than trying to raise more than you or your facilities can handle.

Crucial Times

The two most difficult times to keep calves going is 3-4 days after birth, and the first month after weaning.

A lot can be done to minimize stress, and to help the calf through its first week. First of all, provide a clean sanitary maternity area and a clean, dry, draft-free place for the calf, a place that is away from older herdmates; at this young susceptible age, the calf is not prepared for breathing air laden with germs from older animals. Also be sure the calf consumes colostrum milk within a few hours after birth, and dip the calf's naval cord in tincture of iodine. These are the calf's first lines of defense against invading organisms.

At weaning time the calf is exposed to many stresses: the change from a liquid ration to a dry ration, competition in a group pen, change in feeding techniques (water bowls and mangers vs. buckets, etc.), exposure to more germs from other animals, dehorning, parasites, vaccines, etc. Your challenge is to ease the calf through these stresses as gradually as possible.

Check with your veterinarian to see what shots a calf might need before and after weaning. Be sure the calf is consuming dry feed before weaning. Keep the calf in its pen or hutch about 10-14 days after weaning. Restrict the number of calves in the first group pen to about 5; ideally, this first pen should be away from older animals to give calves ample opportunity to build-up some resistance to herd organisms.

Don't forget deworming. Calves are particularly susceptible to worms, and should be dewormed about every three months; older heifers — at least twice yearly.

Feeding

Heifers, like cows, need a balanced ration, too. Remember, you want them growthy — not fat, not stunted.

Rumensin is a feed additive that has been approved for use with heifers. It's been used for a number of years to increase weight gains and feed efficiencies in slaughter cattle. Research data indicates that when used on heifers, it can increase daily weight gains 0.2 lbs. and reduce age at first calving by 3.8 days. That's worth considering.

To feed Rumensin, you'll also need to feed some grain too, but that is good. A little grain is one way of force feeding heifers the vitamins and minerals they need for good growth.

Acclimating heifers to grain may also help reduce foot problems and off-feed problems following calving. Too many good heifers have left herds a few months after calving because of these two problems. Keeping the heifers' ration balanced, acclimating them to grain, avoiding sudden changes in the feeding program, and not pushing heavy grain feeding too soon before nor too soon after calving may help reduce these costly problems.

I mentioned vaccination of calves earlier. I also want to emphasize the importance of working with your veterinarian to develop an immunization program for your herd for cattle of all ages. Also talk about other preventive practices, including foot care.

And, don't overlook the importance of proper housing as a vital part of a preventive care program. Give heifers a dry place to lie down where they have shade in summer and where they can be protected from cold drafts and from adverse weather. Avoid overcrowding, and provide clean feeding facilities.

If heifers are raised in confinement, be sure the barn is well ventilated. In winter, be sure young calves have a dry, protected bed and an adequate intake of energy; cold, wet surfaces can draw a lot of heat out of a calf's body.

Remember, a well-bred growthy heifer, calving early at the proper weight has great potential for becoming a profitable cow; she'll almost always produce better and last longer than a neglected heifer.

IT RAISES CROPS AND PROFITS.

The new Kubota M4950 is an efficient farm worker.

It has a strong, reliable Kubota diesel engine that's a real miser on fuel. And money you don't spend on fill-ups ends up in your pocket after the harvest.

The M4950 also works like a tractor much bigger than its 47 PTO hp. Because of some new engineering refinements. And because Kubota's 4-wheel-drive system with a unique bevel-gear design adds up to 35% more pulling power than comparable 2-wheel-drive tractors.

The M4950 could be just the tractor you need to raise profits on your farm.

Slash drying costs as much as 75% with the AeroDry™ System

Cut Energy Costs 75%—Uses the drying power of fan forced air. No gas to buy. And the only electricity used powers the computer controlled fan system

Reduced Shrinkage—Shrink loss is cut up to 50% through natural moisture removal without high temperature heat

Better Grain Quality—With no high temperature heat to crack and damage grain, more starch, sugar, valuable nutrients and profit are retained

It's All in the Computer—The AeroDry Computer automatically monitors dry down day and night—then holds optimum storage conditions to keep grain in top condition.

Farm proven from the Midwest to the East Coast, the AeroDry System can improve your grain drying operation. Call or mail the coupon for more information and where to see the AeroDry System in action.

Hostetters are Nat'l Soil and Water Award finalists

GUTHRIE, Ky. — A Pennsylvania farm family, James and Patricia Hostetter of McVeytown, is among 10 finalists in a national awards program designed to recognize outstanding soil and water conservation practices. The program is sponsored by the National Endowment for Soil and Water Conservation and the Du Pont Company.

The Hostetters were selected for their innovative soil conservation techniques used to control runoff and prevent soil erosion on their 180 acre dairy, corn and alfalfa grass farm.

Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block honored the Hostetters at an awards ceremony on a farm in Guthrie, Kentucky. Block said of the finalists, "These men and women practice soil and water conservation because they believe in it, because it is cost-effective and because it helps protect the basic resources of our nation."

Speaking of his commitment to conservation practices, James Hostetter said, "Each person can and should do what he can to improve the quality of his environment. In farming, not only is it a moral responsibility to conserve and protect our resources, but it makes a farm operation much more profitable."

In February of this year, a severe winter storm caused flooding in Central Pennsylvania which damaged millions of dollars worth of urban and farmland areas. Soil was washed away, gullies were created and streams filled with sediment. However, because of the Hostetter's conservation techniques, the water runoff from their field was clear and the soil remained intact.

Conservation is not the exception with the Hostetter family. It is the rule and commitment they have shared since they began farming in the early 1960s.

For the Hostetter's 40 to 50 Holstein cows the farmland is utilized to produce corn and alfalfa grass forage. On this land he uses no-till planting, stripcropping, winter cover crops, waterways, diversions, subsurface drainage, and nutrient management.

Animal manure is applied to the fields at strategic times of the year from a waste storage facility. This keeps the nutrients on the land and out of nearby streams and rivers.

Hostetter uses his land to demonstrate the conservation practices he employs to many farm groups, local schools and universities, and the business community. The Family recently hosted delegations of Chinese and Japanese officials interested in soil and water conservation, including the Chinese Minister of Agriculture.

"The awards program is designed to identify and honor farmers and ranchers who are implementing sound, cost-effective conservation techniques," said Emmett Barker, chairman of the Endowment. "By bringing their efforts to the forefront, we are showing that these farmers and ranchers are leading the effort to protect our soil and water."

An Endowment Technical Advisory Committee reviewed the conservation work of the 47 state nominees, recommending the national finalists on the basis of their accomplishments in soil and water resource management and pollution abatement. Three national winners will be awarded $1,000 each later this year.

The National Endowment for Soil and Water Conservation, established June 1982, is a non-profit, privately funded, non-political organization dedicated to conserving natural resources and fostering a sense of stewardship of the land.

Brockett's Ag Advice

Reduce Machinery Costs

As I analyze the financial side of farm business, there are several items that appear to be problem areas. One of these is machine costs (repairs, fuel, hire, depreciation). The variation from one farm to another is quite high. Sometimes this difference can be justified by size of farm, type of farm, and the "lay" of the fields. Other times it is definitely a management problem. Let's look at some of the reasons behind the problem.

A. Item 1 - repair bills: Excessive repair bills can be caused by:

1. Worn out or wearing out equipment - solution is to watch wear-out points, know the age and amount of use of your equipment, then learn to trade before repairs start to eat up the price of a replacement. Agreed, this is not an easy job.

2. Rough handling due to excess speed for the terrain, making the equipment do a job it was never meant to do, excess strain over a period of time on motorized equipment, or using it as a battering ram.

3. Inadequate maintenance is another bugaboo. Not checking the oil at regular intervals and lack of grease are two common faults. Replacing shear bolts with case-hardened bolts or pole barn nails could be considered as poor maintenance. It can sure raise hob with repair bills when gears, pulleys, etc. break instead of just shearing off a pin. The cost could be $100 plus versus 25 cents.

4. Luxury driving of tractors and driving tractors at top speed on paved roads cause a reduction in tractor tire life. They also cause increased costs of fuel.

5. Stoney ground is hard on knives, plow points and disc blades. There may be no total solution, but an alert operator can probably save half of the broken knife "down time" by simply seeing some of those stones.

B. Item 2 - fuel bills: When fuel was 33 cents a gallon, you could be a bit wasteful.

Now with it well over a dollar you can't. All farmers should occasionally do a time study of their driving habits. It might help them to see where driving time and fuel use could be saved.

Item 3 - depreciation and interest or ownership costs: Often these are hidden costs.

Unfortunately the interest due to machinery purchases is lost in the over-all interest cost for the farm. If farmers started to keep a record of interest due to machinery purchases, they might be shocked or at least enlightened. In some cases it probably exceeds all other machine costs. Depreciation is usually overlooked by a farmer as a machine cost except at tax time when he sees nothing but good in it (saves taxes). Yet it is a real cost and does represent actual dollars spent. It is also an indication of a businesses investment in machinery. Depreciation costs can be reduced by being more careful and more selective when replacing machinery.

Possible solutions:

1. Drive tractor more carefully - you will save on repair bills and fuel, and may even save a life.

2. Be alert when harvesting corn this fall - watch for rocks, tree roots, and snags that can break knives, catch and bend or break spouts, upset equipment or puncture a tire.

3. Maintain equipment by lubricating on a regular basis, replacing worn or broken shear pins, cotter pins, etc., rinsing off acid spills, cleaning out or replacing clogged grease fittings, and adjusting belt and chain tighteners.

4. Purchase equipment that you need, but don't go overboard and oversize it. Why buy a 250 hp tractor for a 100 acre farm?

5. Ask the question - can I hire it done or can I rent a machine cheaper?

The Dairy Business

By Newton Bair

Economics Of Biogas From Manure

The principle of biogas collection and use as a fuel has been and was demonstrated by Glenn Miller, Don Harter and Newt Bair back in 1973-1974 at Ag Progress Days and the Pennsylvania Farm Show. It excited our imagination with the possibilities ten years ago, but it has taken the evolutionary process this long to develop the practical means of collecting and using it on Dairy farms.

Energy Council Workshop

The Governor's Energy Council has produced a Workbook on Anerobic Digestion of Animal Manures which contains numerous formulae and mathematical information for determining the economics of building a Digester. It was written by Mark A. Moser of RCM, Inc., Lancaster, a Digester consultant. The book is intended as a guide only, and the prices used in the calculations are subject to many fluctuations and pressures of change, up or down. Also, every system must be customized to a specific site and situation.

Using the mathematics described in the workbook, I have developed a computer program to assist in looking at the figures. The spreadsheet program allows you to get an instant result for every change of input you would like to test. All necessary and pertinant information for a good decision are generated by the program.

Some Computer Program Results

The main variables that are used in the calculations include; Number of animal units, gas production per unit, relative cost of Propane as alternate fuel, cost of electricity per kwh, added value of the nitrogen in the effluent, sale of the separated solids, and the term and interest rate on financing. How the gas is used will determine both the initial cost of the system as well as the financial returns, and the length of pay-back period. The major assumption is that it will be used to run a generator to produce electricity.

Electricity can be used immediately, and the surplus can be sold to a public utility. Utilities must purchase the excess at a price established by the Public Utility Commission. The heat produced in electric generation is nearly equal to direct burning of the gas, so it becomes a usable by-product of electric power.

Under present conditions and prices, it appears that a minimum of 200 animal units (equivalent to 200, one thousand pound cows) are required for a workable system. Higher numbers of animals appear to increase the cost effectiveness of a system, strictly on the basis of economic return. As fuel scarcity and prices change, the size of an economic system might be significantly smaller.

Just one quick example will illustrate how the program works. For a 500-cow dairy, with median gas production of 70 cubic feet per cow, Propane at 98 cents a gallon, electricity at 6 and ½ cents per kwh, and a ten year loan at 12 percent interest, will produce an annual net cash flow of $21,388. Estimated cost of the system is $233,000. A large operation can benefit from the tax advantages of investment credit, Energy credits, and depreciation.

A system of this size might be developed cooperatively by several smaller farms. Also, depending on the many combinations of the variables used in the calculations, smaller units might be justified. The computer can be of immense help in preliminary economic studies, but a professional Consultant should be hired before one decides to build.

Watch that dry cow feeding ration

UNIVERSITY PARK — Many dairy farmers carefully control rations for milking animals, but neglect to do the same for dry cows and springing heifers. Rations for dry cows, particularly during the last 2 to 3 weeks prior to freshening, greatly influence health and production at calving and during the critical early lactation period. Cows with disorders at freshening or in early lactation are more apt to become problem breeders and may produce less milk, depending on the types of problems encountered.

To help prevent disorders at freshening, it is especially important to avoid excessive amounts of protein, calcium, and energy during the dry and pre-freshening period. This means that only 6 to 7 lbs. of the daily forage dry matter per head should be alfalfa or mixed legume forage. If pasture containing a lot of clover or other legumes cannot be avoided, dry dows need to be fed levels of other forages to limit legume intake. Whole plant corn silage should not provide over 50 to 60 percent of the forage dry matter. Also, it often is better to keep dry cows on dry cow forage than to convert them prior to freshening to a milk cow forage ration that is too high in protein, calcium or corn silage.

Excessive intake on protein may make cows more susceptible to ketosis, off-feed problems, twisted stomachs, udder congestion. Too much calcium in the total ration can lead to retained placenta and milk fever. Insufficient calcium intake throughout the dry period also may lead to disorders at calving.

An abnormally high ration of energy in late lactation and throughout the dry period can produce obese cows. This makes them more susceptible to difficult calvings, metabolic disorders, and infections. It is important, however, to feed a moderate amount of concentrate at least during the last 3 to 4 weeks prior to expected freshening, to establish a microflora and rumen lining that is adapted to a combination of forage and concentrate in the diet. Rumen pH will be appreciably lower and mineral uptake improved when 3 to 5 lb. of concentrate are fed per head daily. Exceptionally high-producing cows that are good eaters may have their concentrate increased to 6 to 8 lbs. during the last week prior to expected freshening. This amount of concentrate also will provide an opportunity to balance the forage ration for pre-freshening animals. It is important that trace elements, such as selenium, and vitamins A, D and E are provided, as well as protein and major minerals, including salt.

Low selenium status can occur within three weeks after supplemental selenium is removed from the ration. Vitamin A and E levels also may be depressed if cows and heifers are not on supplementation, pasture or green-chop during late gestation. Since a lack of these important nutrients can reduce disease resistance, special care must be taken to feed dry cows sufficient amounts of them. Although the concentrate requirement for dry cows is relatively low compared to that of milking cows, their needs for some nutrients are close to those of milk cows. Thus, the concentrate for non-milking animals may require higher levels of supplementation than for milk cows, to ensure adequate vitamins A and E, as well as the appropriate selenium status, injectable preparations may be used at drying off or at least 3 to 4 weeks prior to expected calving. Five ml of MuSe can be administered to provide selenium and vitamin E, and one to two million units of vitamin A can be given in an injectable ADE preparation. Vitamin A injectables are of greater importance when feeding primarily hay or corn silage and should not be needed when the animals have been on good pasture recently.

Manure for dry cows and heifers should be frequently observed. Constipation or feces that are too hard indicate that the diet is low in protein and minerals or that water intake is too low. Making certain that dry cows are fed adequate amounts of forage will also reduce constipation.

Hard work. Long hours. And days spend hoping it will rain Or won't Farming's certainly not an easy row to hoe.
That's why we believe farmers like you deserve special interest. And that's exactly what we're offering with this special Fall program.
8.8% A.P.R. financing: If you buy any new Case 90 or 94 Series tractor before October 31, 1984, and finance it through J I Case Credit Corporation, we'll provide financing for up to 48 months at 8.8% A.P.R.
No finance charges til June 1, 1985. (94 Series) or Sept. 1, 1985 (90 Series). Instead of 8.8% financing, you can choose another very attractive option: a waiver of all finance charges until June 1, 1985 (94 Series) or Sept. 1, 1985 (90 Series).
Either way, you'll get all the impressive benefits of owning a new Case 90 or 94 Series tractor.
And get the special interest you deserve.

OR
NO FINANCE CHARGES UNTIL JUNE 1, 1985 or SEPTEMBER 1, 1985

Potassium affects stress

AMARILLO, Tex. — Stresses, whether during shipping or after arrival at the feedlot, may be involved in altering the optimum nutrient requirements of cattle, according to David P. Hutcheson, animal nutritionist at Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Amarillo.

Speaking to an International Minerals & Chemical-sponsored animal nutrition and stress conference, Hutcheson says that "nutrition and stress interrelate and are a continuous process."

When cattle are transported, he says, the most common stress response is loss of body weight–shrink, comprised of water losses. "It is possible that acute potassium deficiency occurs during stress where the water balance is upset.

"Potassium deficiency," he continues, "is manifested by slow growth, depressed energy utilization, muscular weakness, stiffness, decreased feed intake, intracellular acidosis and nervous disorders. While potassium deficiency hasn't been an apparent problem in animal nutrition, cattle fed high concentrate diets might have suboptimal K levels."

Hutcheson cites a series of experiments defining potassium requirements of the shipped stressed calf. Table 1 illustrates the diet used in these studies.

Table 1

Ingredient	% Composition
Milo, steam flaked	42.5
Corn, steam flaked	24.5
Sugarcane Molasses	3.0
Cottonseed Hulls	23.6
Supplement[a]	6.4

Potassium was added to these experimental diets as KCl, he explains. All calves received the experimental diet for two weeks, then the control diet (.71%K) the next two weeks. Table 2 illustrates the response to gains of calves fed varying levels of K.

Table 2

Levels of Potassium % Dry Matter	Grams of Potassium Per 100 lbs. Body Weight 0-14 Days	0-28 Days	Average Daily Gain(28)
.71[b]	7.9	9.1	1.21
.86[a]	8.6	10.2	1.50
1.27[b]	11.5	11.6	1.70
1.41[a]	14.6	12.9	1.76
2.15[b]	21.1	15.5	1.36

[b] Trial 2

The best gains, Hutcheson says, "were obtained when either the 1.27%K or 1.41%K was fed. The optimum intake of K per 100 lbs. of body weight was 12-15 grams. The requirement for growing, finishing cattle is between .6 and .8% of ration dry matter. The 12 grams K per 100 lbs. of body weight necessary for optimum gain after transportation stress is 20% more than the requirement without stress."

Del. bee warning given

DOVER, Del. — Delaware beekeepers are being urged to avoid purchasing queen bees and package bees from the state of Louisiana and Texas, following outbreaks of Acarine Mite (Acarapis woodi) in those areas.

Michael K. Brown, State Apiarist with the Delaware Department of Agriculture, says the mite entered the United States from Mexico and was discovered in Texas in July. From there is spread to Lousiana.

Officials in both states have ordered infected bees depopulated to stop the spread of the mite which attacks the internal functions of adult bees.

Brown says beekeepers in both states ship bees to other parts of the country and the mite could be spread easily.

"Already it's in two states that we know of and there is potential of finding it in other areas. The mite kills bees and could be devastating to our bee industry. The best way to fight it is to avoid any contact with apiary's in areas we know are infected," said Brown.

Brown says beekeepers who have purchased bees from Louisiana or Texas during the past year should contact him at (800) 282-8685.

NEW

9.7% APR* PEACE - OF - MIND LEASE PLAN

LOWERS YOUR EQUIPMENT COST FOUR WAYS

It's the businesslike way to benefit from new Allis-Chalmers farm equipment.

1. You lock in the low 9.7% Annual Percentage Rate* for all 5 years of the lease.
2. You enjoy low, low payments.
3. You get all the cash discounts now in effect.
4. And in 5 years, you're guaranteed the option of buying the equipment for a predetermined amount.

That all adds up to low overall equipment costs. And in addition, you're protected by the sam liberal PEACE-OF-MIND warranties you'd enjoy if you purchased the equipment.

Stop in today for full details on this money-saving, worry-free program. And ask about the other plans we offer: waiver of finance charges, the 6.9% APR Farm Finance Lease, low-rate retail financing, and more.

* Rental payments include a money cost equivalent to 9 7% Annual Percentage Rate. Allis-Chalmers reserves the right to alter or withdraw programs at its option without notice.

COMPARE COSTS:

Peace-of-Mind Lease vs. Other Financing

	9.7% PEACE-OF-MIND Lease	12.9% Farm Finance Lease	16% Standard Retail
Equipment Cost	$50,000	$50,000	$50,000
Down Payment	N/A	N/A	10,000
Advance Rental	N/A	10,000	N/A
Security Deposit	10,000	N/A	N/A
Total Payments	54,415	54,900	61,078
Purchase Option	7,500	12,000	N/A
Total Cost to Own	$61,915	$66,900	$71,078

Term: 5 years. Assume customer exercises purchase option. All Allis-Chalmers cash discounts apply in all 3 plans. In the Peace-of-Mind Lease, the Security Deposit concept permits lower rental payments and is returnable at the end of the least term.

Metal roof care can prevent problems

NEWARK, Del. — It's all too easy to wait until a section of metal roofing on a farm building ends up in a pasture after a storm to wonder what condition the roof's in. University of Delaware extension agricultural engineer Jim Scarborough advises farmers not to wait that long. A little preventive maintenance now can add years to the life of the roof and the structure it covers, he says.

Start off by going in the building on a sunny day and looking for light coming through holes in the roof. "These holes may seem unimportant – especially if the building is just a livestock shelter. But water can come through them and run down the inside of the roof to a purlin or truss member, causing rot," Scarborough says. note the approximate position of holes, or better yet, if possible mark them by inserting a large nail through each one.

Next, examine the purlins (the horizontal 2 x 4s above the truss) for signs of rot. This usually appears as a dark brown or black stain on the wood and is due to water leaking in from unsealed nail holes. Such damage is especially insidious since it starts on the upper side of the purlin where it can't be seen. "If no rot is visible but you're still not sure, take an awl and poke around the purlin where the roofing is attached," he advises. "Rotted wood is soft and very easy to penetrate."

Now, step outside and take a close look at the roof from ground level. See the nails sticking up in the air? These have been loosened by the expansion and contraction of the roofing. Once a nail has worked loose, the lead or neoprene washer underneath can no longer keep water from flowing down onto the purlins every time it rains.

If the roof is galvanized steel, Scarborough says to check it for dark brown patches – rust spots which indicate the galvanizing has worn off and it's time to paint.

So much for the inspection; now for the maintenance.

If there were many rotted purlins, he advises replacing the entire roof, rather than trying to do a patch job. "It's no use renailing the roofing onto rotted purlins unless you like picking up pieces of sheet metal from your fields after thunderstorms," he says. Fortunately, rotted purlins don't usually mean rotted trusses, so those should still be good. But check to be sure!

If the purlins have rotted in only a few places, fit a new 2 x 4 next to each bad section by shoving it between the truss upper chord and the roofing. Note the position, since the metal above will have to be renailed to the new purlin section.

Now, climb onto the roof for the rest of the repairs. Walk carefully, stepping only where there are nails so as not to dent the roofing – especially if it's aluminum. Start with the nails that have worked loose. Pull them out if possible and replace them with new longer ring shanked roofing nails with neoprene washers.

"If you can't remove a nail without damaging the roofing, cut it off and drive the stub into the purlin," the engineer says. "Then drive a new nail right next to the old one so the washer will cover the hole in the roofing. Use plastic caulk around the nail if necessary. If the nail has only worked up a short distance, a half-inch or less, drive it back into the purlin if the washer is still good. It may work loose again later, but you'll catch it on your next yearly inspection."

Once the roof has been renailed, look for those small random holes that were visible from inside. Seal these by inserting a sheet metal screw into each hole. If any of the laps on the roofing sheets have bent upward, use sheet metal screws to secure them in position again. If the screws aren't sufficient, use plastic caulk along the lap to stop any leakage.

If there are dark patches on a galvanized roof, wire brush any badly rusted areas and prime them with red or blue lead paint or zinc chromate. For the finish coat, a metallic zinc paint gives the best service, Scarborough says. Two coats will renew the zinc coating carried by ordinary galvanized sheets. A single coat should last from six to eight years; two coats should last 12 years.

According to the specialist, each gallon of paint will cover from 600 to 800 square feet of roofing and can be applied with a brush or sprayed on. Spraying will cut the application time by about 50 percent, but will use about 25 percent more paint than brushing. If the barn is for livestock shelter, it may be desirable to make the roof more reflective by covering the metallic zinc paint with a good quality exterior white house paint.

When working on a roof, always be safety conscious. "Remember, that first step down is a long one," says Scarborough. "Don't work on a roof when it's damp from recent rain, or early in the morning when there may be dew on it. Wear rubber or plastic soled boots rather than leather soled ones. And finally, don't get on the roof right after tramping through the cow yard unless you wash the manure off the soles of your boots first – manure makes for slippery footing on roofs."

Pomona Grange to meet

OAKRYN — Lancaster County Pomona Grange No. 71 will confer the Fifth Degree today at 8 p.m. at Fulton Grange Hall, Oakryn.

They will hold their fall meeting at Commonwealth National Bank, 12 S. Market St., Elizabethtown, as guests of Elizabethtown Area Grange No. 2076 Saturday, Oct. 13, at 8 p.m. The Master, Clifford W. Holloway Jr., will preside at the business session. Serving on the resolution committee will be Robert T. Coates, Emma Rhoades, Joseph G. Hess and Kenneth Myer.

Dorothy Berry, Lecturer, will present the program. Richard Hann, Agribusiness Director of The Milton Hershey School in Hershey, will show slides and tell about his trip on the 1983 Friendship Tour to Russia where he visited several farms.

Extension leader named in Del.

NEWARK, Del. — Long-time Kent County agricultural agent David H. Woodward has been named extension state leader for agriculture, natural resources and community resource development in Delaware, effective Oct. 1. He has served as a county agent since 1970.

According to extension director Richard E. Fowler, "Woodward brings to this position an excellent rapport with the people Cooperative Extension serves, and a strong background in county agricultural programs."

A native of Delaware, Woodward grew up on a dairy farm near Wilmington and worked for a time in his family's dairy operation after it was relocated to the Middletown area. While in high school he was active in both FFA and 4-H, serving as state FFA president and winning a trip to Chicago as a state delegate to the National 4-H Congress.

He is a graduate of the University of Delaware, where he majored in animal science. Before joining the Delaware Cooperative Extension Service, Woodward served as New Castle County ASCS executive director for three years, and also worked as a salesman for the Ralston Purina Company.

As a county agricultural agent he has provided leadership and support for Dairy Herd Improvement Association programs in both Kent and Sussex counties. He has been an officer of the Kent Conservation District, and served five years on the New Castle ASCS county committee. He is an ex-officio member of the Kent County ASCS committee, and a member of the board of directors of the Delaware State Fair. Besides supervising the dairy, beef and sheep divisions each year he has worked closely with 4-H and FFA youth programs at the fair.

David H. Woodward

Woodward is a founding member and past president of the University of Delaware Agricultural Alumni Association. He was the 1982 recipient of the association's George M. Worrilow Award, which recognizes outstanding service to agriculture by a university graduate.

As program leader in agriculture, Woodward replaces Richard E. Fowler, who recently became director of the Delaware Cooperative Extension Service. Fellow Kent County agricultural agent Bob Hochmuth assumes the post of county extension coordinator. A search is under way to hire a second agricultural agent for the office.

Hort Show to be held in Ag Arena

UNIVERSITY PARK — Penn State's Hort show is coming home.

Traditionally a part of homecoming weekend, the Hort Show has been held in warm September weather the past few years because its temporary home was only a tent – a tent that last year, blew down the day before the Show.

Now, in its new permanent home in the Ag Arena, the 71st annual Hort Show, Oct. 20 and 21, can resume its place as the showcase of homecoming weekend.

This year's exhibits change with the seasons. As visitors move through the Arena, they will see how nature's influence on plants in the home and garden changes with the seasons. Just as plants in your own home and garden change as they grow, each exhibit will reflect a separate gardening season, from winter's silent, snowy landscape, to the bright flowers of spring.

Bulbs, including daffodils, crocuses and tulips, are featured in the spring garden, while herbs and vegetables will dominate the summer exhibit. Flashed of fall color from marigolds, zinnias and chrysanthemums are the center of attention in the fall garden, and handsome evergreens accent the winter scene.

Since 1928, student organizations in Penn State's College of Agriculture have been responsible for all aspects of the Hort show. Students on campus during the summer semester grow potted annuals and vegetables for display. Perennials, however, are ordered from nearby nurseries and greenhouses. Students also design, organize, set-up and staff the two-day event.

As in the past, students will be selling house and garden plants, apples, cider and mushrooms. Proceeds, after expenses, support Hort Club activities. This year's projects include a pledge to the Ag Arena Fund, Club trips to major gardens, and a scholarship fund. Some money also supports social activities such as ice skating parties, banquets, and student and faculty picnics and parties.

The Horticulture Show at the Ag Arena is free and open to the public Saturday, Oct. 20 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., and Sunday, Oct. 21 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. It's on Penn State's University Park Campus, across from Beaver Stadium on the corner of Park Drive and Porter Road. Parking is free.

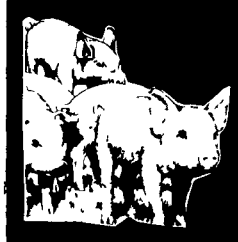
PORK PRODUCTION FOR PROFIT

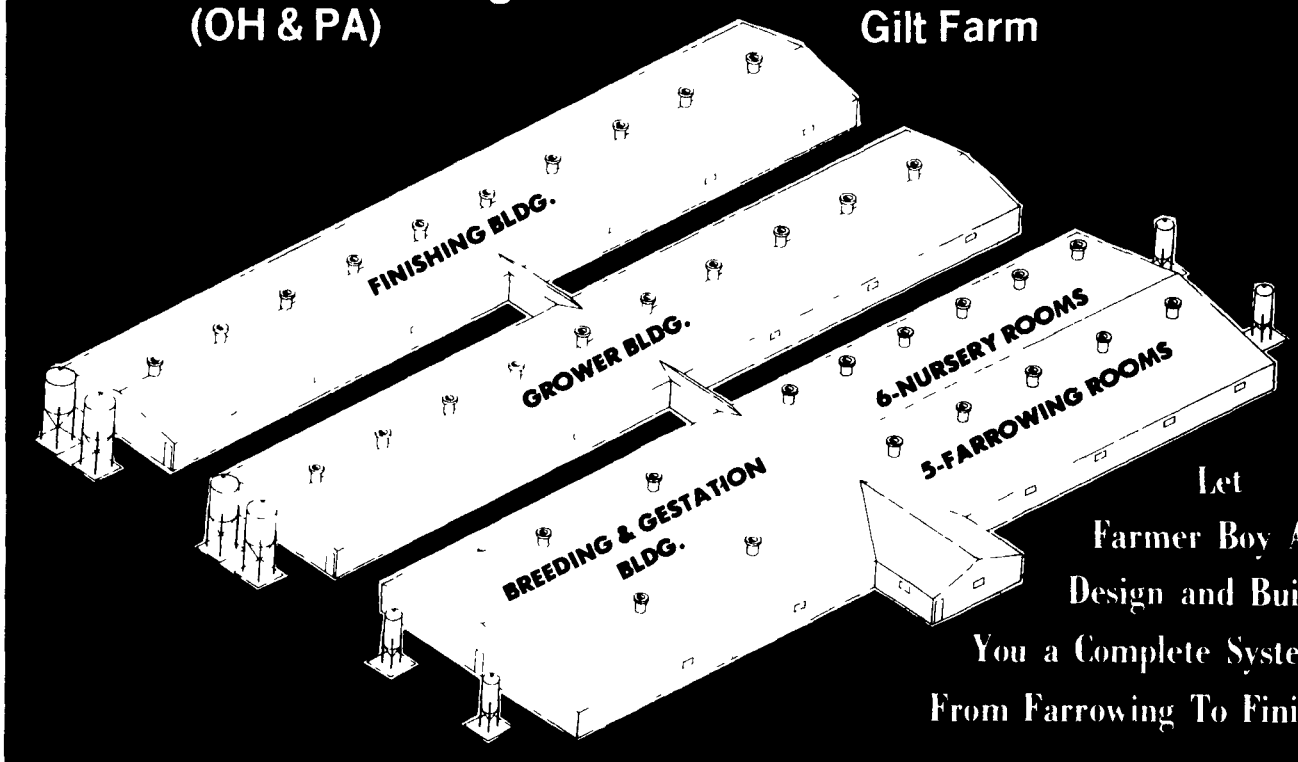


Who has built or remodeled Swine complexes for more than:

1. 7,500 Sows — 2. 30,000 Finishing Hogs

3. Built 2 of the latest DeKalb Crossing Farms (OH & PA)

4. Built 2 of Kleen Leen Boar Farms And 1 Gilt Farm



Let Farmer Boy Ag Design and Build You a Complete System From Farrowing To Finish

FARMER BOY AG has helped many Pork Producers become Profitable - Here's Why:

When We Analyze Your Needs Here Are Some Of The Things We Consider:

1. Type of barn, condition & location.
2. Type of manure handling System.
3. Part time management, or full time.
4. How much field work, how much time available for management.
5. Type of herd.
6. What market you are producing for, finishing, feeder pigs, purebred stock, guilts, etc.
7. What funds are available to work with.

All these points have a determining factor on what swine systems you should consider.

As leaders in our industry we have dedicated our services to producers, not merely to sell equipment but to sincerely help the individual in designing a system that will work for him.

Your equipment is fabricated by skilled tradesmen in accordance with your layout, and is hot dipped galvanized to give maximum protection against corrosion.

Our business was founded on satisfied customers and our future business is from your neighbors, so we stand behind each and every installation to insure a satisfied customer.

Ask us about our customers who run their units at 110% or more of capacity.

PORK PRODUCERS WE SALUTE YOU

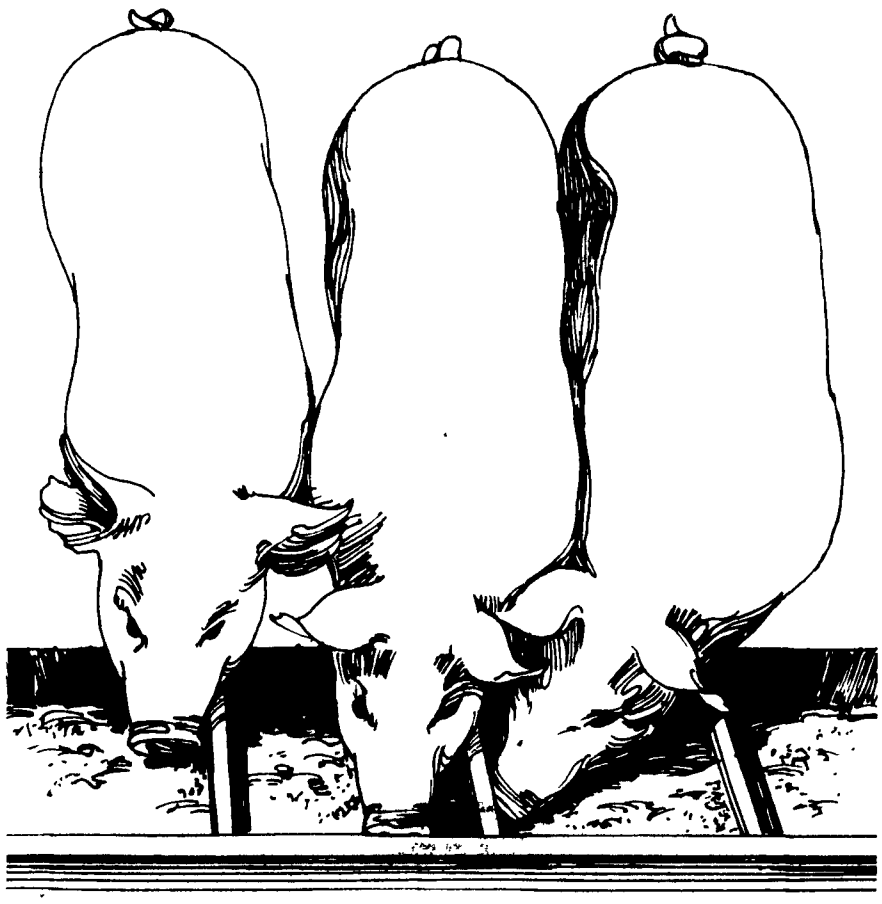
Master Mix Potency Formulated Feeds

Premagro™

Potency Formulated
for results.



Premagro™ concentrate is based on Potency Formulation, a Master Mix breakthrough in feed formulation. This concept provides a precise balance of available amino acids coupled with the correct level of usable energy for increased growth rate and improved feed conversion.

From breeding herd through nursery and on up to market weight, Potency Formulated Premagro is the concentrate for your hogs. Only from Master Mix.

Master Mix®

Premaplus™

Potency Formulated
for the performance minded.

If you demand exceptional performance from your hogs, Premaplus™ is the concentrate for you.

Premaplus is Potency Formulated with high levels of available amino acids coupled with the correct levels of usable energy. And it's highly fortified and properly balanced with all other required nutrients. Premaplus gives maximum daily gains and the best possible feed conversions.

Premaplus has proven its performance in both on-farm and Central Soya Feed Research testing. Results confirm gains of 1.82 pounds per day with 2.96 pounds of feed per pound of gain.

For the performance you demand, try Premaplus. A Potency Formulated concentrate from Master Mix.

311 entries in Bloomsburg Fair dairy show

BY MARGIE FUSCO

BLOOMSBURG — The weather may have turned cold, but Scott Kriebel, of Benton, was having a hot time last week. His "K-Dale Morgan Adrea" Guernsey took state honors in Harrisburg early in the week, then copped 4-H Grand Champion and Senior Champion titles for him at the Bloomsburg Fair. K-Dale Telestar Amy sweetened the pot by taking Open Class Senior and Grand Champion honors for Kriebel as well.

With over 100 exhibitors and 311 dairy cattle entered, the dairy judging was a lively two-day event, the center of the agricultural program at the 130-year-old fair. Exhibitors came from as far away as the Philadelphia area and Somerset to compete against the best of the local talent.

Holstein

In the Open Class Holstein show, Sansdale Farms, of Wyoming, Pa., owned the Grand Champion bull and the Grand Champion and Senior Champion cow. The Reserve Grand Champion bull was owned by Robert Bronson, Bloomsburg. Dennis Wolff, Millville, owned the Reserve Grand Champion and Reserve Senior Champion cow. The Junior Champions were raised by Benjamin Wolff, Millville, and Jean LeVan, Milton (Reserve).

Premier Breeder honors went to Ritter-Ridge of Muncy, followed by Franlo-Alken, Bellefonte, and Globe Run, Petersburg, Pa. The Premier Exhibitor was Globe Run, followed by Richard Yule, Millville, and Ritter-Ridge.

Columbia/Luzerne Counties took first-place herd honors. Second went to the Northumberland/Montour herd, followed by the Schuylkill County herd.

Jersey

Jersey Open competition was nearly swept by Mildred Seeds of Downingtown, who took all but the Reserve Junior Champion honors, which went to Joyce Harpster of Boalsburg.

Ayrshire Open-Class honors went primarily to Samuel Diehl of Bedford. Diehl took Grand Champion bull, as well as all the cow honors except for Reserve Junior Champion, which went to Marian Dent of Berwick.

Brad Shultz, Danville, took 4-H Grand Champion and Junior

BLOOMSBURG — Bidding was fast and furious for the Grand Champion Market Lamb at the Bloomsburg Fair 4-H/FFA sale on Sept. 27. When the dust settled, Tod Laudenslager, of Northumberland County, walked off with $4.20 a pound for his 124-lb. lamb. Sunset Ice Cream, Williamsport, was the buyer after a close contest against W.A.DeHart. The $4.20 bid was a new fair record for Bloomsburg.

The Reserve Grand Champion Market Lamb, owned by Joyce Harpster, of Boalsburg, brought $2.50 a pound for its 92-lb. weight. It was purchased by Breech's Agri-Service, Catawissa. Other lambs, ranging from 85 to 125 lbs. brought a range of 75 cents to $1.10 per pound as winning bids. There were 27 lambs submitted for sale.

Market steer bidding was also led by Sunset Ice Cream, Williamsport, which took home the 1225-lb. Grand Champion steer for $1.72 a pound. The steer was owned by Chad Hummel of Selinsgrove. Clark's Feed Mill, Paxinos, won the bidding for Paul Wertz's 1245-lb. Reserve Grand Champion steer, at $1.09 per pound. Wertz lives in the Danville area.

The First Place Lightweight (920-lb.) steer, owned by Nathan Hampton, of Columbia County, went for 86 cents a pound to Beale and Zeisloft Appliances, Millville. Christine Baker of Northumberland County sold her 1020-lb. Middleweight First Place steer for 70 cents lb. to Dick Baumert Livestock, Herndon. Breech's Agri-Service bought the First Place Light Heavyweight (1090-lb.) steer from Greg Haladay of Columbia County for 89 cents a pound.

Twenty-one market steers were put on the block. They ranged from 920 to 1420 lbs. and brought 61 cents to $1.72 a pound. Auctioneer for the evening was Mark Glick. — M.F.

Bloomsburg sheep winners listed

BLOOMSBURG — Although poultry and swine were missing from this year's Bloomsburg Fair, there still was plenty of sheep action in the livestock barns. This year, the sheep comfortably took over the hog barns and were happy to show their stuff in the new surroundings.

Eight breeds of sheep were shown in the Open Class, and most of the championship honors went to the Moore family of Rome, Pa. Ken and Ruth Moore owned the Dorset, Hampshire, Shropshire, and Rambouillet champions. Their son Ken, Jr., had the champion Cheviot ram and ewe.

Other awards went to Emil Millott of Needmore for the champion Corredale; Harold Royster of Boalsburg, champion Southdown ram; Frederick Stillwagen, champion Southdown ewe; and Max DeHart of Milton, champion Suffolk.

Livestock 4-H sheep awards were taken by: Jim Kodlick, Beaver Springs - Southdown Dorset ram; Kyle Brown, Klingerstown - Dorset ewe; Michael Troxell, Beaver Springs - Hampshire Ram; Joyce Harpster, Boalsburg - Shropshire ram and ewe; Duane Bassett, Sunbury - Suffolk ram and ewe.

The market lamb winners were Todd Laudenslager, Dalmatia (Grand Champion) and Joyce Harpster, Reserve Grand Champion.

Sheep showmanship awards in the senior division went to Joyce Harpster, First Place, followed by Kyle Brown, Amy DeHart of Milton, Jim Kodlick, and Sandra Troxell of Beaver Springs. Junior showmanship winners were Todd Laudenslager, First Place, followed by Kristen Gale of Benton, Duane Bassett, Bess DeHart of Milton, and Troy Laudenslager.

Goats were also judged in the 4-H Class. Debbie Smeltzer of Bellefonte took Best of Show with her two-year-old Alpine. She also took top Alpine and LaMancha honors. Harold Harpster, Boalsburg, took second place honors in the Alpine class and in the Toggenburg judging, where he had the Reserve Grand Champion. Other winners were: Dana Harter, Bellefonte - Grand Champion Toggenburg and other Toggenburg honors; Rosemary V. Zartman, Vicksburg - Senior and Grand Champion Nubian; Dana Marie Holder Walker, Bellefonte - Junior and Grand Champion a Saanen and Reserve Grand Champion Nubian; John Dugan, Turbotville - Reserve Junior and Senior Champion Nubian.

Judging the event were George Hunger of State College (Sheep) and A.J. Miller of Furlong (Goats).

Champion Ayreshire honors. Reserve Grand Champion and Reserve Junior Champion laurels went to Marilyn Kiess of Jersey Shore.

Brown Swiss

Guernsey

In addition to Scott Kriebel, other winners in the Guernsey Open competition were: Corey Wolff, Millville - Reserve Grand Champion and Junior Champion; Bonny Sue Wolfe, Sunbury - Reserve Senior and Reserve Junior Champion cows and Reserve Grand Champion bull. The Grand Champion Guernsey bull was owned by Carl Miller, Tamaqua.

Other 4-H Guernsey winners, in addition to Kriebel, were: Corey Wolff - Reserve Grand Champion and Junior Champion; Susan Moslock, Danville - Reserve Senior Champion; Bonny Sue Wolfe - Reserve Junior Champion.

Senior showmanship winners in the 4-H Dairy competition were: Ray Wolfe, Milton, First Place; Kurt Brown, Second Place; Bonny Sue Wolfe, Third Place; Sandy Shuman, Fourth Place; Wendy Kriebel, Benton, Fifth Place.

Junior Showmanship honors were awarded to Richard Shuman, Bloomsburg, First Place; Corey Wolff, Second Place; Carey Jurbala, Third Place; Jennifer Shultz, Munch, Fourth Place; Susan Moslock, Fifth Place.

Beef judging

In the beef cattle judging, Chad Hummel of Selinsgrove brought home a new rosette, to add to the one he got a week earlier at the Snyder County-Beaver Springs fair. Hummel's 1225-lb. steer took Grand Champion, while Paul Wertz of Danville owned the Reserve Grand Champion.

Beef showmanship honors in the Senior division went to Ann Haladay of Columbia County. Greg Haladay was second, followed by Richard Crone, Northumberland County; Carolyn Lehman, Lycoming County; and John Fetterman, Columbia County.

Junior beef showmanship awards were presented to Eddie Chapman, Columbia County (First Place); Christine Baker, Northumberland County (Second Place); Jason Brokenshire, N Montour County (Third Place); Nathan Hampton, Columbia County (Fourth Place); Chad Hummel, Fifth Place.

Judges for the dairy competition were Neil Bower of Wellsboro (Holstein) and John Marchese, Washington, Pa., Colored Breeds.

Farmers have less insurance coverage

WASHINGTON, D.C. — One of the rewards of farming, the story goes, is a robust, healthy life out in the sun. Trouble is, that's not always how things are. Farming is dangerous.

Statistics show it can hike your odds of going deaf or getting cancer or heart disease, and farmers stand a greater chance of being hurt on the job than workers in most occupations.

Although the risks are high, farmers, their families, and hired workers are less likely than other workers to be covered by health insurance, according to economist Helen Jensen, formerly with USDA's Economic Research Service.

Jensen notes that 90 percent of the American population is covered by some type of health insurance, either privately through group or individual policies or publicly through federal, state, or local programs. For farmers and farm managers, the rate of overall coverage is about 82 percent. For the entire farm population, it's 86 percent.

While the differences may not seem significant at first glance, Jensen says they indicate the difficulties farm people can have in obtaining adequate protection.

She explains that only the largest farms meet the criteria to participate in private group insurance, which generally offers the lowest rates and the widest coverage. In addition, many public insurance plans provided by individual states exempt agricultural workers.

Even farmers who buy individual health insurance coverage may find their policies cost more and cover less than group plans. Why?

"It relates to structure, both in farming and in the insurance industry," Jensen says.

"The average farm business is unincorporated with fewer than five employees and cannot qualify for group programs. Tax laws allow health insurance payments to be considered part of the cost of doing business only if the farm firm is incorporated," she says.

Reduced access to group insurance is the major difference in coverage for farm versus non-farm individuals, according to Jensen.

Dog licenses urged

HARRISBURG — The kick-off of the 1984-85 hunting season in the commonwealth signals increased activity by hunters and their dogs in the state's fields and meadows. As part of preparations for entering the field, hunters are urged to license their dogs, according to Dog Law Director Donald Moul.

"Obtaining a license is the best possible way to protect the investment made in a fine hunting dog," said Moul. "If a dog strays and is licensed, hunters have an inexpensive, reliable tool to help them recover the animal," he said, noting that the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Dog Law Enforcement receives, increased numbers of lost animal reports during hunting season. Under state law, all dogs six months or older must be licenses. Failure to comply could result in fines up to $300 plus costs.

Hunters who find a stray dog in the field should approach the animal with caution, and attempt to determine if it has a license. The appropriate County Treasurer's Office should be contacted as soon as possible.

"Regular small game season begins November 3, with squirrel and grouse season beginning October 20. However, hunters, like other dog owners, are urged to register their dogs before January each year. Dog licenses go on sale December 1 every year. Many sportsmen mistakenly wait until the hunting season begins," he said.

Officials are also stressing the importance of having dogs innoculated against rabies because of the rising number of cases reported in the wild animal population.

License fees are $3 for spayed and neutered dogs and $5 for all other dogs. Senior citizens 65 and older pay only $1.75 for non-productive dogs and $2.75 for all other dogs, and must present proof of age when applying. Licenses may be purchased at the County Treasurer's Office or through an authorized agent. All dogs should be innoculated against rabies by a licensed veterinarian.

Salt water pond helps dry grain

ARGONNE, Il. — A pond of water that can store enough heat during the summer to dry a farmer's grain crop in the fall was the subject of a workshop this week at the Department of Energy's Argonne National Laboratory, near Chicago.

Argonne has developed a system to remove heat from its experimental salt gradient Solar Pond for use in drying grain, heating barns and houses or supplying domestic hot water.

Salt water is the key to the pond's ability to collect and store solar energy. Salt concentration increases with depth, forming layers that suppress convection circulation within the pond.

Sunlight penetrates the surface, warming the lower layers. Because the lower layers are heavier than those above them, they cannot rise, and their heat remains trapped.

The pond can produce useful heat day and night, all year round, even when covered with winter ice. Peak water temperatures at the bottom of the solar pond exceed 170 degrees F at the end of summer, low winter temperatures are about 100 degrees F.

The quarter-acre pond is about 12 feet deep. It holds 700,000 gallons of water and about 700 tons of salt.

The heat removal system developed by Argonne uses a heat exchanger to tap the hot water at the bottom of the pond. Air passes through the heat exchanger at 8000 cubic-feet-per-minute and is warmed by the hot water to about 40 degrees above the temperature of the surrounding air. This temperature and airflow is sufficient for grain drying operations.

No-till data available

NEWARK, Del. — Delware farmers interested in trying a few acres of no-till small grain this fall can get helpful production advice from the extension fact sheet, "No-till Wheat and Barley in Delaware." The fact sheet was prepared by University of Delaware extension agronomist Frank Webb. It contains information on planting equipment, soil fertility, seeding rate, variety selection, liming rate and weed control.

For the past five years the specialist has been evaluating notillage cultural practices on small grains at the university's Georgetown substation. He says test results are promising, with no-till yields about the same as those from conventionally grown wheat and barley.

To obtain a copy of the no-till wheat and barley fact sheet, contact the county extension office in Newark (451-2506), Dover (736-1448), or Georgetown (856-5250).

Farm Talk

by Jerry Webb

It's always worth while to note important milestones in agricultural history. Such is the case with the topic of today's column - the glass milk bottle. It's a hundred years old this year. No matter that during the past century the glass milk bottle was invented, accepted, rose to considerable prominance and has just about disappeared. You'll see more glass milk bottles in the Delaware Agricultural Museum than on any Delaware milk route and if you'll look closely at that museum collection you'll see the names of dozens of Delaware dairies, that at one time bottled and delivered their own milk, that don't even exist anymore.

Actually the first glass milk container was patented in 1878. Known as the Lester milk jar it was a glass container with a rubber gasket and a thumb screw holding down a glass cover. But the first real bottle that was nationally available was patented by Dr. Hervey Thatcher of Potsdan, New York in 1884. Thatcher who was a druggist and an inventor worked to develop a total system in milk handling. He also invented a number of other milk handling items that aided in keeping milk clean during the filling process.

The early Thatcher quart bottles were 10 inches high and 4 inches in diameter and carried the words "Absolutely Pure Milk The Milk Protector." There was also an illustration of a Quaker milking a cow on the front of the bottle.

In the early days milk bottles were available in a variety of colors and sizes and with some truly ingenious closures. The Thatcher bottle had a small mouth and a short neck. And it was gradually modified to lower the cream line since lots of cream was the style in those days.

The dairy business was very different then with small dairymen operating their own processing plants and delivery routes. They sold raw milk, unpasteurized with nothing added, door to door. Some even sold butter, eggs and other farm produce. Back then there were no supermarkets and the daily delivery of a few quarts of milk to each household was expected. Refrigeration wasn't very far along in the early part of the century and milk cleanliness wasn't that good either. Consequently, the smart homemaker bought only a few quarts daily - usually the amount her family could be expected to consume before the delivery truck came again.

In the rural neighborhood of my boyhood days there were three "Grade A" dairies within walking distance. Each had what was considered a large dairy herd of about 30 cows, a complete milk bottling plant and one or more delivery trucks. Each day they would pass our farm gate on the way to or from their deliveries in the nearby city. There were literally dozens of those small dairies serving a town of 30 or 40 thousand people. The glass milk bottle was the heart of the business. Each company had its own trade mark, some painted, others molded into the glass with colorful farm names like Twin Elms, Grand View, Sunnyside, Mapledale, and so on.

The old folks who were raised in the city can reminisce fondly about the horse drawn delivery vans, before my time incidentally, that plodded down the streets in the early morning light with the gently old horse stopping at all the right places and moving forward at just the right time without any signal from the driver. Most times the driver would load his carrying case with bottles of milk and move door to door down the street until it was empty. Meanwhile the horse would plod along unassisted stopping at just the right place for resupplying.

Milk wasn't always pasteurized, homogenized and supplemented with Vitamin D. In those days raw milk was all that was available. The breed of cows the dairyman kept determined the amount of pure cream in the upper part of the bottle. Some dairies even used cream separator bottles to make it easier for the housewives to pour off the cream. These had a pronounced dent at the bottom of the neck. And some companies offered special little spoons that would fit down in the bottle to trap the milk so the cream could be poured off easily. Now those bottles and the spoons are collectors' items.

Sure there are still a few die hard dairies delivering door to door in glass bottles but the heyday of the glass bottle has come and gone. For a half century it was the primary container for all milk sales and then came supermarkets and the need for one way bottles. Disposable paperboard cartons and plastic containers were the answer. Fifty years ago virtually 100 percent of the milk that was sold went into glass bottles. Today they have all but disappeared. The most recent survey shows that paper is used for 42 percent of all milk packages. Plastic molded containers account for 57 percent.

Another big change in the milk industry has been in the size of the container. The original glass bottle held a quart of milk. Then some half gallon bottles came along and then disappeared. Recent information shows no more than 5 percent of milk sales in quart containers, and more than half the milk sold is packaged in gallon containers. That figures when you consider current life styles-fewer trips to the store, more and better refrigeration and changes in milk processing and packaging. The newest development, ultra heat treated milk, has a shelf life of 3 to 6 months. Although not completely acceptable to consumer tastes it is no doubt the direction of the future.

If you long for the good old days of milk bottles and delivery trucks then visit the Delaware Agricultural Museum. There is an interesting and rather complete display on the subject. Virtually every Delaware dairy that ever had its own bottle is represented in the collection.

It may be worth while to reminisce about the history of the milk bottle and perhaps long for the good old days of door to door delivery and that World War II song "Milk Man Keep Those Bottles Quiet." But it's really what's inside the container that counts and today's milk is or at least can be a better product. Technology has improved on nature's most perfect food. Today's milk products are pure, fresh and well packaged. There's no question they're better than ever.

It will be interesting to watch the upcoming milk promotion campaign. It's financed by dairy farmer dollars and aimed at expanding the milk market. Millions of dollars will be spent to convince consumers of something they should already know – that milk is good for you and a much better choice than all of those other beverages. As the slogan says it's "Fitness You Can Drink."

Soybean farmers meet

SALISBURY, Md. — Soybean farmers, extension specialists and agribusiness leaders in the Mid-Atlantic area got together recently to learn about new advances in weed control, variety selection and management practices to increase soybean yields. The occasion was the Annual Summer meeting of the Mid-Atlantic Soybean Association at Rutger's University Research Center in Adelphia, N.J.

Jim Justin, Rutger's Extension Crop Specialist, lead the tour through the test plots on control of the new weed, Spurred Anoda, and other weed problems. Other plots included variety trials and a project aimed at maximizing soybean yields. Using an assortment of soybean varieties and carefully controlling production variables, Rutger's Extension Soil Specialist, Roy Flannery, has astonished the soybean industry by successfully producing over 100 bushels of soybeans per acre on his test plot for several years.

Following the tour, Fred Pew, President of the Mid-Atlantic Soybean Association, directed a short Mid-Atlantic Soybean Association business session. Roy Atkinson, retired Chief of the Bureau of Seed Certification of the N.J. Department of Agriculture, was presented a plaque in appreciation for his services to the Mid-Atlantic Soybean Association and contributions to the soybean industry.

Jim Palmer, Director of Member/State Relations of the American Soybean Association, reported that the successful ASA/ICI Americas membership program has pushed the ASA membership to a record 29,000 dues-paying members.

ALUMINUM STRAIGHT LIVESTOCK BODIES

LENGTHS AVAILABLE: 8' to 32'
WIDTHS: 96" standard to 102" optional
HEIGHT: 6'6" standard to 8' optional

Eby all-aluminum livestock bodies are built to offer you an alternative to heavy wood and steel bodies. In addition, rugged "Eby" construction and aluminum combine to offer years of maintenance-free service.

CONSIDER THE FEATURES OF AN EBY ALL-ALUMINUM BODY

Eby livestock bodies are 35% to 40% lighter than other wood and steel bodies.

Eby's all-aluminum construction is maintenance free. Periodic pressure washing is all that's required to maintain that new look.

Eby's bodies are built tough and are backed by a written factory warranty.

Sheep farming session set

FLEMINGTON, N.J. — The New Jersey Dorset Sheep Breeders Association will be sponsoring a panel discussion on the pros and cons of small sheep farming on Friday Oct. 12, at 8 p.m., at the Hunterdon County Extension Center, Route 31, Flemington.

Members of the panel include: Beth Perry, well-known Dorset breeder in New Jersey. Mrs. Perry has been involved with the sheep industry for over 50 years. She and her son, Charles, have a flock of 75 Dorset brood ewes, both horned and polled, and run the New Jersey Sheep Breeders store from their farm.

Bob Rogers, together with his wife, Liz, run a 50-ewe Hampshire brood flock in Burlington County for the past 20 years. They usually also carry a minor breed and, currently, they are lambing about a dozen Corriedales.

William Rockafellow, of Bucks County, Pa., has been very active in the sheep farming business. He has approximately 100 Dorset and Suffolk ewes in his flock which he has built up over the past six years. He is currently President of the Bucks and Montgomery County Wool Cooperative, a member of the Bucks County 4-H Committee. He has also taught sheep production classes in Bucks County.

Karen Butcher of Greendell, Sussex County, graduated from Delaware Valley College with a B.S. in Animal Husbandry. She recently received her M.S. from the University of Connecticut. Her research at the university dealt with embryo transfers in sheep along with semen evaluation with rams. Karen and her sisters have a flock of Dorsets and Suffolks.

Jonathan R. Youde is a graduate of the North Scotland College of Agriculture. He began life with traditional sheep farming in the Scottish highlands, then moving south for intensive sheep production where he was involved with Suffolk crosses, Romney's and some pedigreed Texels. After a brief spell with a wholesale meat company as a livestock buyer he returned to shepherding, running 4,000 mule ewes (Border Leicester x Swaledale). He is presently shepherd for Barrettstown Joy Farm, Whitehouse, running 550 ewes.

Everyone interested in sheep farming is invited to this informative panel discussion. For additional information, call Jane Ladany - (609) 397-2879, or Ruth Crommelin - (201) 236-2324.

Dairylea youth to meet

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Area young persons will assume leadership of their own convention when Dairylea Cooperative, the Northeast's largest farm-to-consumer milk marketing cooperative, holds its 77th Annual Meeting at Hotel Syracuse, Syracuse, N.Y. Tuesday and Wednesday.

Dairylea's Young Cooperators, the Co-op's youth division, will hold a full-scale convention of their own, complete with business meetings, elections, and informational sessions, according to Bob Schulerud of Valatie, N.Y., president of the Young Cooperator Executive Committee.

Dairylea President Clyde Rutherford and General Manager Bob Hall will address the Young Cooperators at the YC breakfast Wednesday. Dairy Prinesses of New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania will also be on hand for the breakfast.

The young men and women, who range in age from 12 to 25, will be among an anticipated 1,000 delegates, associate delegates, member families, and guests participating in the Cooperative's 77th Annual Meeting. Dairylea has some 3,000 member families in its seven state region and marketed more than $363 million worth of milk during its fiscal year ended March 31, 1984.

Representatives from Pennsylvania will include Mark and Felicia Woodruff, Danville; Jim Smith, Lawrenceville; and Nancy and Trudy Vail, Honesdale.

"Twist-Lock" cups: newest innovation from the new leader

The new SWISH Twist Lock cup is available also for brood grow

...another reason SWISH saves you more labor, more birds, and more money

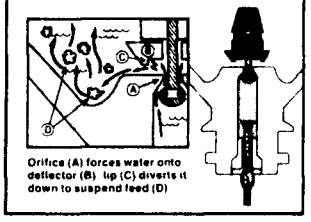
The newest twist in cage watering makes cup cleaning and maintenance a real snap It s SWISH s Twist-Lock ' cups for cage layers and brood-grow watering systems

Saves labor. No more contortions with hand tools inside a cage – one simple twist of the wrist unlocks and removes the unitized cup and valve It s that easy to maintain when necessary

But with SWISH, it's hardly ever necessary That's because our cup is self-cleaning Our patented valve keeps the cup clean by flushing any feed particles out so birds can consume them with the water

Installation is a snap too with SWISH s new cups they simply snap into the desired location, and the hose attaches to the water line outlet These are some of the ways SWISH's new cup saves you labor – easy installation, low maintenance, and labor savings between flocks because our cup constantly cleans itself

PATENTED VALVE IS KEY TO OUR PERFORMANCE



Orifice (A) forces water onto deflector (B) lip (C) diverts it down to suspend feed (D)

Helps save more birds. Because our cup is self-cleaning, algae and bacteria growth is not a problem as with cups that don t flush out feed particles Clean cups mean less chance of disease and less mortality And our big cup means good access to water, for a good level of bird health

SWISH saves you money. That s the bottom line with a system that cuts labor and keeps birds alive and productive

Get all the facts about our new cup and other SWISH innovations See your SWISH distributor or contact us

CONSULT AN EXPERT BEFORE YOU REPLACE YOUR HOME HEATING SYSTEM

The energy decisions you make when it comes time to replace your worn-out heating system will live with you for a long time. That's why it makes a lot of sense to contact a PP&L residential consultant before you decide on the heating system that's best for your home. Our consultants can help you get the most out of the energy you put into your home.

No matter what type of heating system you're considering, these energy experts can advise you of all the energy options available to you. Plus, they may be able to help you achieve big savings by way of off-peak electric space heating systems.

The best energy decisions begin with good advice. If you're considering replacing your present heating system with a new, energy-efficient model, be sure to contact the folks at PP&L. They'll be glad to discuss all the ways electricity can serve you — and save you dollars, too!

COAL

Why use coal, and in particular, why use "GREENWOOD ANTHRACITE COAL" in your stove or furnace?

Coal is more convenient than wood.

The high carbon content of "Greenwood Anthracite" means high BTU heat output. distributed by: Rohrer's Quarry inc.

INTRODUCING THE 2,100 lb. TON

FREE: 100 lbs. new High Octane® brand Top Feed B37 with each ton purchased.

Here's your chance to save on Purina's newest high energy top feed—uniquely formulated for maximum palatability to assure cows get highest possible nutrient intake.

Fact is, new High Octane Top Feed B37 has been research proved to have up to twice the eat appeal of conventional quality concentrates for top feeding.

Superior nutrient concentration helps reduce stress during early lactation and improves breed-back performance for greater lifetime production.
